Back Bay Refuge opens new visitors center

Land of Many Seasons

By Eileen Clark
Virginia Beach has many special attractions to offer its residents and visitors. One of the most unique attractions in the city is "a place where land and sea converge; where nature feeds its own."

It's the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge, 4,600 acres of beach, dunes, woodlands and marsh located in the extreme southeast corner of the state. And, recently Back Bay celebrated in style to commemorate the dedication of its new Refuge Headquarters/Visitors Contact Station. Food, entertainment, exhibits and noted guests were all a part of the dedication activities. The facility, which was completed last year, contains an auditorium; numerous displays and large scale wildlife photos; and an information desk.

Festivities began with entertainment by Everkleer, a husband/wife team from Virginia Beach who performed traditional and original mountain folk music.

The musical entertainment was followed with the facility's dedication ceremony. Special guests included Congressman William Whitehurst and other distinguished political and wildlife speakers. After the dedication, the public was invited to tour the Visitor Contact Station to view special slide/tape programs on the Back Bay Refuge, and to observe the many exhibits and displays.

In addition to attractions in the Chesapeake traffic, Beach traffic: A pain

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

On his way to the Virginia Beach City Council meeting Monday afternoon, Councilman Robert G. Jones had to overcome a couple of obstacles, making him late.

The problem, he said, was that he got tied up in Chesapeake traffic. If Virginia Beach grows, he said, "I hope it doesn't grow like Chesapeake."

Councilman John A. Baum suggested telling that to Chesapeake City Councilman John W. Butt. Butt has in the past held Virginia Beach up as a sample of how a city should not grow, especially when he votes against higher densities.

Council approves sports authority

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The Virginia Beach City Council has approved the creation of the Sports Authority of Hampton Roads with Mayor Harold Heischouer as the commissioner from Virginia Beach.

Council unanimously passed a resolution setting up the Authority which also is being considered by other cities including Hampton, Newport News, Portsmouth, Norfolk, Chesapeake, and Suffolk.

Legislation for the Authority was adopted by the 1986 General Assembly. The Authority is being created to provide for the acquisition, financing, operation or maintenance of a public recreational facility containing one or more racetracks, coliseums, stadiums, and parks.

The eight commissioners on the Authority will represent the eight participating political subdivisions.

William Foster Jr., representing the Future of Hampton Roads, the organization which promoted the Authority, said that the Authority would be empowered to issue its own bonds.

Virginia Marine Science Museum receives four oak trees

A special tree spade begins the transplant.

The Virginia live oak is lowered into the soil.

Timber--in reverse

The Virginia Marine Science Museum recently received a very special transplant.

Four Virginia live oaks (Quercus virginiana) were donated to the VMSM by Greenbrier Farms, Inc., of Chesapeake to enhance the museum's landscape design.

The trees, each 15 to 20 years old, were brought in and planted by a special tree spade. The 84-inch spade carefully digs up trees with little disturbance to their root systems, transports them, and then plants them in their new environments.

According to C. Mac Rawls, museum director, the trees, valued at a total of $8,400, are a welcome and appreciated aesthetic addition to the museum. They are especially appropriate for the Museum's setting because they are indigenous to this area and are very salt tolerant, of prime importance in a coastal area.

The Virginia Marine Science Museum is set to open this summer at 717 General Booth Boulevard. This new facility will showcase coastal resources and will offer a glimpse of life beneath and beside the sea.

Lady Marlin's ball players dazzle, amaze

By Eileen Clark

It has definitely been a season to remember for the Lady Marlin's Softball Team of Virginia Wesleyan College.

The Lady Marlin's dazzled and amazed everyone, including themselves, as they concluded their season with a 39-4 game record. According to the team's coach, Jack Jordan, "we knew we could have a good team this year, but it was a surprise that we'd be this good."

Coach Jordan

Jordan contends that there have been three factors which contributed to the Lady Marlin's success this season.

"First of all, we played well as a team," he said, "secondly, we had strong pitching and very good defense, particularly in the second half of the season; and, thirdly, we hit the ball well all year."

These factors took the Lady Marlin's to where they are today -- awaiting word on whether or not they will play in Regionals. If the team is invited to play in the Regional Tournament, a success there will take the Lady Marlin's on to the National competition against Buena Vista College in Iowa.

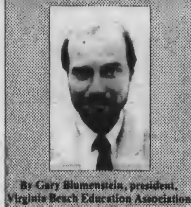

According to Jordan, it has been an exciting season for the team.

"We've won 30 games in a row this year and we've won a lot of the games in the last inning," he stated. When playing against the UNC-Greensboro this spring, the Lady Marlin's scored six runs in the bottom of the sixth, and won the game 8-7. All of the runs were scored with two outs on the board. Other big wins for the Lady Marlin's were achieved against Longwood (Division II); Liberty University (Division II); and St. Canisius (Division I). By far, the team's most impressive game was against nationally

Let's keep funding up!

LET'S TALK

By Cary Blumenthal, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

The Virginia Beach Education Association last week requested City Council to accept the 1986-87 School Board budget as presented. As I stated in my remarks to City Council, the operating budget contains no new initiatives, other than a restructuring of the gifted program. The salary increases fall in line with efforts of the General Assembly and the Governor to improve the salary levels of Virginia teachers in relation to their colleagues in other states.

VBEA President-Elect Rob Jones in his presentation to City Council stated, "...if this budget has its shortcomings, those shortcomings are on the side of frugality rather than excess. Even though the budget doesn't solve all the problems that teachers, nurses, audiologists and psychologists face, it is an important step in the right direction." He went on to say,

"Teachers' salaries will continue to lag behind the national average in Virginia Beach. The average teacher's salary in Virginia Beach is $24,048 this year, and a teacher with a bachelor's degree has had to teach thirteen years to reach that average. This is $1,209 below the national average teacher's salary. If the national average continues to gain by 7.3% per year, the proposed budget would move our teachers approximately 1.9% closer to average compensation. We must add here that the teachers of our schools are not average, as is indicated by the achievement of our students and the reputation of our schools."

A proper perspective is that the Governor's Commission on Virginia's Future, which said, "We should create conditions that make teaching a career with financial and professional rewards equal to its importance."

Ernest Boyer, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Assessment of Teaching said, "Recruiting future teachers should be at least as important as recruiting fullbacks." This proposed budget will not bring us the Walter Payton's of the chalkboard, but it will be a step in the right direction.

Class size in Virginia Beach will continue to be at one of the highest levels in the state if the proposed budget is adopted. The inclusion of funds for the staffing and operation of Rosemont Forest and Birdneck Elementary Schools does address class size with a step in the right direction.

THEIR FUTURE IS IN OUR HANDS.

The City of Virginia Beach is a young, growing city with great potential. The promise of our future is in the classrooms of our schools today. Because of this, we at VBEA are proud to have been a part of the strides that have been made in our city toward providing a setting that will attract talented, qualified people into our classrooms.

However, we cannot throw caution to the wind and become complacent about where we are or less determined about where we need to be. I say this in the face of recent comments made by U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett. Using a recent survey by a private research center, Mr. Bennett contends that 'teachers earn enough money.' He uses a worn-out cliché by citing the shorter working year that teachers 'enjoy,' but fails to point out that most teachers put in an extra day a week in uncompensated time after school and on weekends, grading papers, sponsoring activities and going to school to upgrade their skills and knowledge. This is not to mention those teachers who must also work part-time jobs to support their families.

The report went on to say that 90% of those surveyed were satisfied with their work. I would only hope that Mr. Bennett, and others who support the findings of this study, don't confuse 'being satisfied with our work' with our determination to be compensated as professionals for a job that is being done well.

Virginia Beach is staying above that kind of regressive thinking and for that parents and teachers alike can be thankful and, hopefully, we can all look forward to more years of responsible educational funding and, as a result, progressive and expanding programs for our children.

Hayes receives scholarship

Terry Hayes of Virginia Beach has been named recipient of a Transfer Honors scholarship at Atlantic Christian College valued at $2,000 over a two-year period.

She plans to enter the North Carolina College as a junior in the fall of 1986 and will major in the education of the deaf. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hayes of 2001 Queen Victoria Court.

There were also displays by organizations and agencies such as the Virginia Wildlife Federation; the Virginia Marine Science Museum, the Back Bay Wildfowl Guild; and many others.

According to Kathy Zeamer, an Outdoor Recreation Planner at the Refuge, "With the facility opening, we felt it would be a good time to do something major to increase public awareness of Back Bay."

The exhibits and other attractions were combined with Back Bay visitors in mind. "We chose a lot of activities which would be enjoyable to the public. We contoured various exhibitors in the area - wildlife oriented groups, individual artists and carvers," stated Zeamer. Much of the program was put together with the help of people who donate their services and time to Back Bay. According to Zeamer, "A lot of the open-house/dedication festivities were the result of volunteers."

As stated in one of the Back Bay slide shows featured during

1979 Kellam grad receives nation's top ROTC award

A 1979 Kellam High School graduate has gone on to earn one of the nation's most prestigious awards for ROTC excellence during a recent ceremony conducted by the U.S. Army top officials held at the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, VA.

Kevin L. Gilbert, son of Virginia Beach residents, Raymond L. and Beverly J. Gilbert, 3234 Saxon Place, received the 1986 George C. Marshall Award as one of over 300 college seniors from across the country recognized for their excellence in military science and leadership skills.

Gilbert, representing Old Dominion University, says that "I'm honored to be selected as the recipient for this award from my college."

The Marshall Awards have been honoring the nation's top ROTC cadets since 1977. They were named in honor of General George C. Marshall who served as the Army's chief of staff during World War II and later went on to serve as Secretaries of State and Defense during the Truman administration.

During their four-day conference, the students attended a wide range of lectures and seminars dealing with topics such as national security, leadership skills and the future of the military officer corps.

While attending Old Dominion, Gilbert has received the Distinguished Military Student Award and is a Phi Kappa Phi honor society member for academics.

Gilbert plans to be com-

To reach fish, check your motor

Check the fuel level in the lower unit. Make sure it's filled to the proper level as specified in the owner's manual. If it's been leaking, the lower seals and gaskets may need replacing. If you didn't drain the gearcase and refill it with the manufacturer's recommended solution when you put it up for winter, do so now.

Check the spark plugs. Make sure the plugs are gapped to specifications. Check the plug terminal connections and wiring and make sure they are clean, unfrayed and snug-fitting.

Check the boat's battery. Many fishermen don't take care of their batteries.

They should always be charged up fully after a fishing trip. If your boat is going to sit there for a week, two weeks, three weeks, you should always charge your batteries-up and keep them fully charged while they're sitting. A fully charged battery will always keep a lot better.

Be sure to clean the terminal posts and connectors of any corrosion.

Check the fuel tank. Make sure that the fuel system clamps and fittings are tight and not leaking. Make sure the fuel lines are not cracked from age or wear; and replace them if necessary.

In the South, very few people winterize their boat like they do in the North. Lots of boaters in the southern states put their boats up in a stall and let them sit there from November until January. If they're doing this, they should at least fill their fuel tanks totally full. Putting a boat up with an empty tank or partially filled tank is an invitation for condensation to form in the tank as it warms up, gets cold and warms up again. When February rolls around and fishing season starts, they're going to have lots of trouble with water in their gas.

If you didn't add fuel conditioner before storage, you'd better clean the fuel pump filter before adding fresh fuel. Most outboard fuel filters are designed for easy cleaning, but be sure to check your owner's manual before you do it yourself. Add a good fuel conditioner before filling the tank to help absorb any moisture that may have accumulated during storage.

Check the propeller. Check the prop for dings, dents and bends that can cut performance. If it's too far gone for minor home repair take it to a prop shop or be ready to invest in a new one. Stainless steel props offer much greater durability than aluminum propellers.

Check the paint job of the motor. Your motor is in a lot of water. It stands to reason that any paint chips or flaking ought to be repaired to prevent corrosion. Most manufacturers offer factory-matched colors in easy-to-use spray cans. Take care not to paint over the water intake screen or the sacrificial zinc anodes.

25 exhibitors at Senior Showcase

By Eileen Clark

Luthor Manor in Virginia Beach was the place to be recently, as the "Showcase for Seniors" was featured in conjunction with Older Americans Month.

Sponsored by the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Aging, the event was held to provide Virginia Beach senior citizens and their families with a greater awareness of the local resources the city has to offer its older residents.

The 25 exhibitors present at Saturday's program included: The Association of American Retired Personnel; Respite Care for the Elderly; Comprehensive Mental Health; Virginia Beach General Hospital; Tidewater Legal Aid; Bayside Hospital; C & P Telephone; and many others.

Luthor Manor was a very appropriate setting for the Showcase, as it is a senior citizens apartment complex subsidized by HUD. The complex houses approximately 130 residents in one bedroom apartments.

According to Betty Page, President of the Luthor Manor residents, "there are so many available resources in the city. This event provided information that most people may not otherwise learn about."

ranked Methodist College. According to Jordan, "It was our biggest and best game all year. It decided who will probably go to the Regionals and have the chance to go to Nationals."

The Lady Marlins have also played in and won the Dixie Conference Tournament and the Methodist Invitational. The team's success has earned it the rank of 14th in the nation, NCAA-Division III. Along with the team's accomplishments, Jordan has also personally had a fruitful, second season in women's softball at VWC. Recently, he was named Dixie Conference Coach of the Year.

"I owe it all to the kids. I couldn't do it without them," Jordan said.

Lady Marlin players named to the Dixie Conference "All-Conference" team are: Amy Simpson, Sherry Hawkins, Susan Sigler, and Tina Clark. Those named to the "All-Tourney" team are: Tina Clark (MVP), Regina Marasco, Anita Fuller, Teena Nickle, Cheryl Keck, Sherry Hawkins, Amy Simpson and Susan Sigler.

Aside from the obvious success the team has achieved this year, they have also had a great time out on the field. The Lady Marlins are "a tight group-they have a lot of fun playing, and it has paid off for them. They are one of the finest groups of athletes I've coached," said Jordan.

What's in sight for the team that is facing the possibility of competing in the Regionals and then the Nationals? In the words of Coach Jordan, "We take every game one at a time and try to have fun - so far, so good."

Oceana Sailor of the Quarter takes her job, family, future seriously

By Katie Clark

A sailor who takes the Navy, her job, her family and her future seriously is Air Traffic Controller Second Class (AC2) Della Topf, the Naval Air Station Oceana Sailor of the Quarter for the third quarter FY-1986.

Whether it is doing her Navy job, becoming qualified in new areas or running her son to softball practice, she gives it all her best. Topf is a tower supervisor in the Air Operations Department.

As the supervisor of five other people she holds a position usually held by a more senior petty officer. Topf is also qualified to clear and depart information from the radar room to aircraft utilizing NAS Oceana's facilities. "I prefer working the radar room (commonly known as the blue room) to the tower because it's more of a challenge," said the petite brunette Topf.

Petty Officer Topf works shiftwork. "I work a day, a night and an evening which are followed by two days off," Topf explained. On top of her rather unusual working hours, she attends Saint Leo College four-nights-a-week. "It is a crazy schedule but it all works out," she said. Her husband, Frank, is also an air traffic controller with Air Operations. He works a different schedule which enables one of them to be home more with their eight-year-old son, Bo.

To further her career opportunities, Topf completed all the prescribed study requirements needed to earn the Enlisted Aviation Warfare Specialist (AWS) Wings. The course, which took her about three months to complete, is designed to make her more knowledgeable and well versed in Naval aviation. "It was a very hard course and demanded a lot of study time and effort. My family helped a lot. Bo helped me study by drilling me with flashcards that I made," commented Topf.

Topf enlisted in the Navy in December 1978 and attended basic training in Orlando, Florida. Upon completion of basic, she received orders to NAS Kingsville, Texas. "I was assigned to security for 90 days. It was an opportunity for me to discover all the different ratings (job specialties) available. I became interested in the air traffic control rating." She pursued all the requirements involved in the rating. After she had been an air traffic controller for a year she attended Navy class A school at Memphis, Tennessee. She returned to NAS Kingsville after school and was there for another four years. She then requested and received orders to NAS Oceana.

"The Navy has given me a lot—especially schooling and access to family services, the gym and racquetball courts. You really can't beat it," Topf commented about the facilities and benefits she enjoys in the Navy.

As the Sailor of the Quarter, AC2 Topf receives a station plaque, a $50 savings bond donated by Sovran Bank, two tickets to Busch Gardens, dinner for two at the Red Lobster, dinner for two at the Voyager Enlisted Club, and a luncheon at the enlisted club with NAS Oceana Commanding Officer Captain L. F. Norton and Command Master Chief Lawrence Ervin.

$10,000 raised at spring flower sale

By David Raible

The Annual Spring Flower Sale, sponsored by the Junior Virginia Beach Garden Club, this year produced more than just bedding plants, hanging plants and statuary.

At the end of the flower sale, Junior Virginia Beach Garden Club President Ann Wright gave Museum Director C. Mac Rawls a check for $10,000. This is the most money ever raised at the annual flower sale.

Ann Wright said of the event, which was held at the Dome, "It's becoming a real happening at the Beach. I have people come up to me and ask if they can order flowers months in advance of the sale. The nicest part is that everyone participates because they know we are raising money for the Virginia Marine Science Museum. The museum is our club's first love and one which we have been involved with for many years. It's nice to know that the community stands behind us in that support."

Mac Rawls, Director of the Virginia Marine Science Museum complimented the Junior Virginia Beach Garden Club for their hard work. "This is not an easy event to put on every year. They work months in advance and even after the event is over. We are extremely proud of their past successes and they can be very proud of what they have accomplished this year."

The career fair is the culmination of a Girl Scout patch program which encouraged the troops and their leaders to explore water career possibilities and to work on related activities and projects. The goal of the patch program is to increase awareness of the enormous array of water-related careers and job opportunities. It also emphasizes that we do indeed live on a water planet.

Among the professional exhibitors will be a Coast Guardman demonstrating knot-tying skills; the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration; area maritime museums and organizations (including the Cousteau Society, Yorktown Shipwreck Project and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation); story tellers from the Norfolk Story League; a member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary with a 22' Ranger craft to talk about safe boating and boating maintenance; and the Ocean Rescue Service's lifeguard exhibit. Sandbridge petting zoo planned

A Sandbridge businesswoman plans to develop a petting zoo on a 8.9 acre parcel at 665 Sandbridge Road, about a mile from the ocean.

Overriding a unanimous recommendation for denial from the Planning Commission, City Council, Monday afternoon, unanimously approved a use permit requested by Chandler S. Dennis for a recreational and amusement facility.

In addition to the petting zoo, plans call for pony rides, fishing in a pond and canoeing in a canal.

Bruce Stallings, attorney for Dennis, said that 200 residents of Sandbridge support the project.

Dennis' other enterprises in the area were lauded.

Realtor Jack Siebert said that her gift shop on Sandbridge Road should be the envy of any in Virginia Beach. He also listed her gas station and grocery store. She said that Dennis "would not do anything you will be ashamed of."

Council members were mostly concerned about the curve in the road. Stallings said the project would not support the expenditure of $20,000 for a turn lane. He said the applicant would be willing to put up flashing lights.

Councilman Robert G. Jones suggested putting a four-year time limit on the permit so that the situation could be reviewed by Council.

The permit was approved conditioned on the four-year review and the installation of cautionary lights.

Under the city's water resource recovery fee program, neighborhoods on well water can "lock-in" their Water Resource Recovery Fee at the current rate if 51 percent of the neighborhood property owners request that the City extend water service to them. The current rate will increase on July 1.

The meeting will be in the school's cafeteria.

Seashore State Park at Cape Henry

Bordered by Chesapeake Bay on the north, and on the west by Broad Bay, the park's 2,770 acres are mostly preserved as a natural area, with many miles of hiking trails, crossing lagoons where stand primeval cypress festooned with Spanish moss, winding around and over large sand dunes, and through an amazing variety of plants. Campsites on the shore of the Chesapeake Bay, a nature interpretation center, grocery and snack concessions, boat-launching ramps, and programs in the amphitheater, are among the park's facilities.

Look forward to weekly vegetable shopping

Weekly vegetable shopping in Virginia Beach is actually something to look forward to this time of year.

It seems there is a new fresh offering each week.

Some spring green vegetables like Virginia-grown spinach, kale, collards and garden peas have very short seasons, making it crucial to get them as soon as they're available. Some greens are coming in now, and the peas and a second crop of greens will be arriving in local supermarkets around the middle of May, said Susan L. Wiley, marketing specialist with the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Shopping for fresh greens and garden peas can be quite deceiving. Greens cook down so much that you have to buy what looks like too much in order to have enough. With peas, you have to look beyond the pods and try to figure the amount to buy. Here's a list of expected yields to assist with determining how much to purchase:

Collards - 1 lb., stems removed = 3 cups cooked = 6 servings;
Kale - 1 lbs., stems removed = 2½ cups cooked = 4 servings;
Spinach - 1 lbs., stems removed = 1 cup cooked = 2 servings;
and Green Peas - 1 lb., in pods = 1½ cups cooked = 2 servings.

The greens coming in now are young, tender, new leaves that have sprouted on plants leftover from last season. The crop coming in later in May is from this year's early spring planting. Both crops of fresh greens promise a flavor that is outstanding when steamed just until tender, in just about 20 to 30 minutes. Cooked greens are traditionally served with smoked ham, spring onions and a sizzling skillet of cornbread. Leftovers freeze beautifully and can be reheated quickly in the microwave oven.

Spinach is also outstanding as a salad green. In fact, some people that do not like cooked spinach love it raw in a tossed salad. Crisp bacon, sliced hard-cooked eggs and crumbled blue cheese are quite complementary in a spinach salad.

Sweet green peas must not be overcooked or they will surely have bland flavor and mushy texture. Instead, immerse shelled peas in rapidly boiling water for just 2 to 4 minutes; drain and season with butter. If using the peas cold, as in the following recipe, dip them in cold water as soon as they are removed from the boiling water. Drain them well and combine in pasta, rice, seafood or green salads.

Spring Green Salad
4 cups cooked fresh peas
1 jar (4 oz.) pimientos
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped cucumber
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup vinegar
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water
Salt and pepper to taste
Combine all ingredients, mixing gently until well blended. Chill 12 hours before serving. Makes: 6 to 8 servings.

105,000 people attended last fest

The berriest of times

By Eileen Clark

It's a "slice of Americana" and the "berriest of times." It's a laid-back, down home celebration which salutes the small community.

But its no small feat. Over 105,000 people came to it last year for fun, food and warm hospitality. It's the annual Pungo Strawberry Festival; and this year, according to the event's Publicity-Chairman, Stuart Cate, "the festival looks towards being the biggest and best yet."

The festival, which is held each spring in the Pungo area of Virginia Beach, first began a few years ago when local residents decided it would be a great way to show community spirit and pride.

"Pungo is an agriculturally-based community with farming as its major industry. So, the community said why not have a festival based on something grown here," Cate stated. From then on, local merchants and farmers have donated to the event their time and their land.

The Party Has Begun

The actual Strawberry Festival will take place on Saturday and Sunday, May 24 and 25. But, the celebration has already begun with a number of pre-festival events.

On May 3, in Munden Point Park, the First Annual Strawberry Festival Benefit Barbecue was held with over 600 people in attendance. All proceeds from the event were donated to the upcoming festival. In addition to the cookout, there will be pre-festival sporting events which will comprise the Strawberry Classic Weekend. The weekend, which will begin on May 17, will consist of a women's softball tournament sponsored by Piedmont Airlines; and a golf tournament sponsored by Hell's Point Golf Course. Also, a pre-festival event will be held prior to the festival will be the Miss Strawberry and Little Miss Strawberry Pageants to help kick off the Memorial Day weekend events.

At the Strawberry Festival,

there will be a variety of attractions. To begin the first day of the event, there will be a parade and a navy fly-over. To mark the beginning of the festival's parade, fireworks—in the form of colored smoke—will be released into the sky. The parade will feature over 100 units, and will be a "major salute to our Military during the Memorial Day weekend," stated Cate.

As the festival continues, visitors will find over 100 craft booths, three stages of live entertainment, pony rides, a petting zoo and much more. There will also be exhibitors to display everything from wool-spinning to pottery to cow milking. One of the most interesting exhibits will feature an American Indian encampment. Visitors will have the opportunity to meet with the Indian representatives who will talk about their native culture. For those who are into arts and crafts, there will be a crafts competition at the festival, from which a $50 winner will emerge. "There's no entry fee," according to Cate. "Just bring your crafts down."

Additional attractions will include groups of square dancers and cloggers who will perform along Princess Anne Road in the festival area; and for those who want to sample some home-style cooking at the event, there will be more than 45 food booths which will feature both entrees and desserts. The desserts, of course, will be made from strawberries—ice cream, pies, cakes, etc.

This year, the 1986 Pungo Strawberry Festival Executive Committee selected Larry Joyner as the event's Chairman. Joyner, who has been an active member of his community for many

Secretary Dole to address CBN grads

Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole will be the commencement speaker at CBN University's 7th annual graduation ceremonies on Saturday, May 17, when 180 students will receive their graduate school diplomas. The announcement was made today by CBN President Bob G. Slosser.

City Council tackles budget, including several tax rates

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council Monday afternoon approved on the first reading a $423,142,404 Operating Budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year with a second reading scheduled for tomorrow (Thursday).

At the same time Council adopted a $3.80 per $100 tax on personal property but set the tax on boats at $1.30 per $100 valuation.

The real estate tax rate remains the same at 80 cents per $100 valuation. Higher assessments averaging 6.22 percent, however, will result in higher taxes.

The Commissioner of the Revenue, Robert Vaughan, had recommended that boats be taxed at the same rate as motor vehicles, $3.80 per $100 valuation. Councilman Louis R. Jones and Robert Fentress moved for the lower boat taxes, for equity, they said, and to encourage boat owners to keep their boats in Virginia Beach. Boat DeShields will present slides of past Festivals and answer any questions participants may have. Advance registrations are required. To register or learn more about this program call the library at 481-6094.

For Seniors

SEVAMP program celebrated

By Eileen Clark

People who help people—that's the underlying philosophy of SEVAMP, a local senior services agency; and on Friday, May 30, SEVAMP will be celebrating something very special—the 10th anniversary of its Senior Companion Program.

SEVAMP, which stands for South Eastern Virginia Area-Wide Model Project (for Senior Services), offers a variety of programs to the community. Millie Aben, SEVAMP representative, says that the main thrust of the organization is to "deliver services to the elderly to better their lifestyles in any way possible."

That's exactly what the Senior Companion Program has done. It has taken older, lower-income citizens and put them to work as companions for people in the community who need their assistance. According to Aben, there are numerous situations which require people to seek the aid of a Senior Companion.

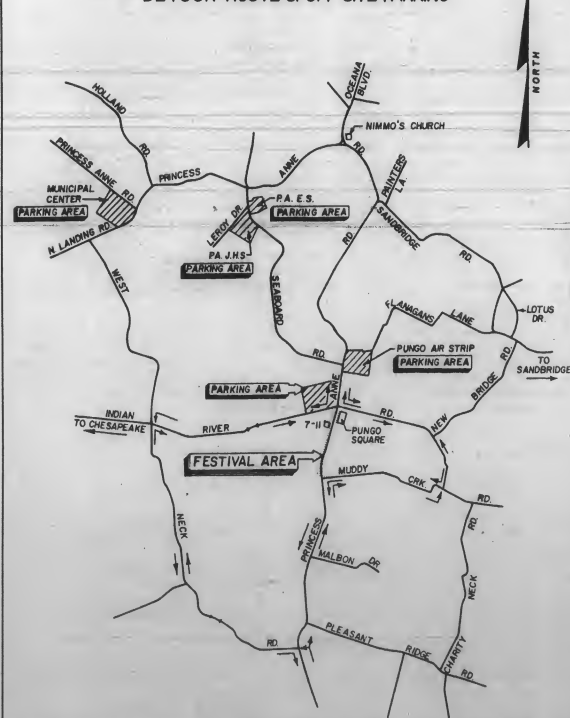

"There are lonely people; people just discharged from the hospital who need additional assistance; people who need help shopping; those suffering from long-term care illnesses; etc. who could benefit from the assistance of a Senior Companion," she stated. Aben also added that, because the program is locally and federally funded, there is no charge to those who utilize the Senior Companion Program. Therefore, "it is a free service to the community." Far more than just benefiting the recipients of the program's services, the Companion Program also benefits its elderly volunteers. The senior citizens who work with the program are paid a stipend of $2.20 per hour for four hours of work a day. "A stipend is considered a contribution to their well-being and does not affect any benefits they may receive, whereas a salary would (affect benefits)," stated Aben.

Aside from the monetary compensation, senior volunteers find the program "gives them a purpose to go out and help; they love doing it," asserted Aben. To mark the 10th anniversary of the SEVAMP Senior Companion Program, the agency will recognize the more than 60 elderly participants by hosting a luncheon in their honor at the Lighthouse Restaurant in Virginia Beach. The recognition luncheon will include entertainment by the Huntersville Chorus, as well as the presentation of a red carnation to each Senior Companion. The flowers are being presented compliments of C&P.

According to Aben, SEVAMP is very happy to have the opportunity to honor its senior contributors on the program's 10th anniversary. "These are very, very dedicated and committed people who have given of themselves to the program," she stated.

PUNGO STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL - 1986 DETOUR ROUTE & OFF SITE PARKING

Portion of P.A. Road closed for festival

To accommodate this year's Pungo Strawberry Festival May 24 and 25, plans have been made to close a portion of Princess Anne Road in Virginia Beach for the duration of the event.

The section of Princess Anne Road from Indian River Road to Muddy Creek Road will be blocked off from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, May 24, and noon to 7 p.m. Sunday, May 25.

For those citizens just passing through this area, a clearly marked detour route will facilitate their travel.

Beach politics

New team ready to tip ball off

Congratulations to Virginia Beach's newest City Council members; Nancy K. Parker, John D. Moss, John L. Perry, and Albert W. Balko.

Also, congratulations to Robert G. Jones, who was re-elected to a second term; and Barbara Henley, who ran unopposed and was re-elected to her third term.

And while the recent election brings new ideas and fresh experience to council, the city also lost some experienced former leaders.

Virginia Beach doesn't just want to be a littoral resort city. It wants substance. It wants a future. It wants dignity.

Virginia Beach politics has in recent years been strained. Different values, different directions and different goals has given the appearance to the public of an ununited, directionless city in search of an identity. Virginia Beach doesn't just want to be a littoral resort city. It wants substance. It wants a future. It wants dignity.

There has always been talk of reducing the size of council; of electing the mayor by the popular vote of the people, and not just by the city council members. Undoubtedly, in certain circles these ideas will continue to circulate.

But now, for a panoply of reasons, Virginia Beach has a new team ready to tip the ball off. The future will not be easy, primarily because the same things which makes the city great also sometimes impedes its progress: an intelligent, affluent populace which sets high standards for itself and its leaders. But as the years go by, and the city and its residents mature, Virginia Beach will eventually find its appropriate place in the sun. - G.D.G.

Wake up, it's spring!

Spring is upon us once again. Its a time of rebirth; a time for new life and new friends. This spring, awaken those dormant stirrings within you, the ones you put aside for the winter, and celebrate the season by doing something different!

For those who "don't have time" to do something special or something different, keep in mind that with the arrival of spring, there is an added bonus of an hour due to Daylight Savings Time. So, take that one hour and benefit yourself or someone else in commemoration of springtime. Here are some suggestions on how to do just that:

This spring, awaken those dormant stirring within you, the ones you put aside for the winter, and celebrate the season by doing something different!

Read a chapter in that book you've been meaning to get to.

Write a letter to a friend you haven't seen in a while.

Run; work out.

Visit someone who needs a friend.

Do volunteer work at a children's hospital or senior citizens center.

Take a class in something practical or something fun-cooking; Renaissance Literature; car maintenance; art; or horticulture.

Buy some tulips and plant them in your front yard.

Take some photos of interesting people, places, and things.

Go for a long walk on the beach at sunset.

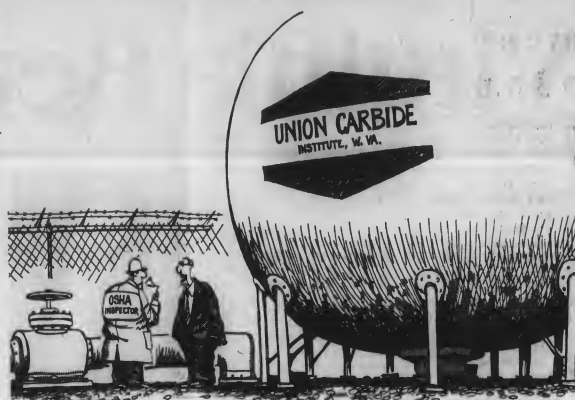

Put up some new wallpaper to brighten your favorite room.

Go for a ride on a bicycle built for two.

Watch the sun rise.

Relax!

Remember, spring comes but once a year. Don't let it pass you by! - E.L.

"We don't need safety systems... we know there's a leak when the lawyers all show up."

Letters to the Editor

Support the Francis Land House

Editor:

It was approximately six years ago that the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs, the local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Princess Anne Historical Society envisioned the Francis Land House as a city owned cultural/educational center for the City of Virginia Beach.

That dream is soon to be a reality. The Francis Land House is to become a focal point for the city - a house museum that will be a center for city celebrations, open for tours, school trips and special events.

Volunteers are presently undergoing extensive training with the Administrator, Susan L. Taylor, in preparation for the opening to the public on Saturday, May 17th.

For this museum to be successful and a credit to the city, it needs the support of all Virginia Beach citizens, especially those interested in historical/architectural preservation. The "Friends of the Francis Land House" will be the organization that will provide the moral and financial support to make this a viable tourist attraction as well as community center. The "Friends" will have an organizational meeting on Sunday, May 18 at 3 p.m. All residents are being invited to attend and become charter members. For further information, please contact Ms. Taylor at 427-8811.

Trees can be saved by builders

The Urban Forest

By Paul Revell
State Forester

Virginia Beach has been undergoing a building boom over the last few years as our area has experienced rapid growth. One of the heavy construction activity has been the removal of or damage to a large number of trees.

To some extent, the loss of trees is unavoidable. Every tree cannot be saved in high density development nor is saving every tree desirable. Some trees require removal due to their condition and some species are not particularly suitable as landscape or shade trees. Certain trees on a site will inevitably interfere with construction.

However, the extent of tree damage or outright tree removal in the more recently developed sections of Virginia Beach shows that developers and builders are not devoting enough effort to tree preservation and protection. Some subdivision sites have been completely cleared of trees. On others, trees have been left with little prior planning for their protection during the construction process. Many trees now standing in newly constructed areas will certainly be dead in a few years from construction damage, leaving the homeowner with an expensive removal problem.

The sad thing is that much of the tree destruction that has occurred in Virginia Beach could have been avoided with only minor cost and inconvenience to developers and builders. The steps in tree preservation and protection are relatively simple. Site examination prior to the start of construction could identify trees worth saving and trees that should be removed. Trees of suitable vigor and shape that will not directly interfere with building activity could then be marked for preservation. The builder and his contractors can then exercise some care to see that trees are protected while building activity takes place.

Bark abrasions and root zone compaction are the biggest killers of trees on construction sites. Keeping bulldozers, trucks, etc. away from trees is essential and can be accomplished rather easily if the site is marked prior to construction. In some cases, temporary protective wood barriers could be built. Bulldozer blades and tools do not have to be cleaned against the side of a tree nor do stacks of building material have to be piled there. With a little prior planning, underground cables can be located and installed to avoid harmful root cutting. Fires and trash can be kept away from trees.

Builders and developers have to make a profit and no one is suggesting that a fortune be spent in-tree protection. Tree preservation and protection does not have to be expensive, it just has to be planned for. Development and tree protection are compatible and good examples can be found. Unfortunately these examples are the exception rather than the rule in recent years.

New real estate book is right on target

Common-Sense Mortgage: How to Cut the Cost of Home Ownership by $100,000 or More; By Peter G. Miller; Harper and Row, 1986.

Real estate is a hot item right now in Virginia Beach and at the very heart of the furor is the low-interest mortgage.

As the prime rate continues to drop experts predict interest rates as low as 8.5 or even 8.0 by the end of 1986. If this is the case, people will continue to borrow money for homes which were previously unaffordable. What a thrill it is to finally own your own home rather than rent someone else's! It is possible now more than ever, and the more we know about the subject at hand, the better off we will be.

Finding the house of which dreams are made is really only half the task; the second half of home-hunting is just as important.

Memories

As she looks across the land,
Standing high above the trees,
She remembers all that's happened,
As many people flee.

She remembers all the slavery,
The unfairness and the fights.
They thought there was a difference
Between the colors black and white.

She remembers all the wars,
All the sorrow and the hurt.
The people dying everywhere
Because nothing seemed to work.

There also was a problem
With men and women both.
Men thought that they should have more rights,
But women wanted to vote.

When she looks across the nation,
She sees mountains standing high,
She sees the Great Lakes and the Grand Canyon,
And all the people walking by.

She has seen all the Presidents,
The White House being built.
She's seen the Presidents being killed
And all the people's guilt.

She remembers the Depression,
When many people died.
When she wished she could help them,
She felt a tear in her eye.

When she looks at all that's happening,
She wishes by and by
That there be peace all over,
So she wouldn't have to cry.

Why?

A dog has fur.
I want to know why.
A cat likes to purr.
I want to know why.
But again,
I say with a sigh,
I want to know why.

A snake has scales.
I want to know why.
People have nails.
I want to know why.
But again,
I say with a sigh,
I want to know why.

All things have a why.
But I'll try,
Not to always ask "Why."

Teachers have never worked just an 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. job; and won't

LET'S TALK

By Gary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Nothing raises my chalkdust more than irresponsible statements about teachers made by those who should know better. The Virginian-Pilot recently reported on a survey conducted by a private research group called the National Center for Education Information. Praised by U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett, the report says that teachers earn less than other workers because they "usually work only 180 days."

Nothing could be further from the truth and that such comments should be deemed worthy of praise by individuals such as Bennett only serves to frustrate and annoy the professional educators who have spent many years trying to bring forth the reality of teacher time.

The fact is that teachers in Virginia are contracted for at least 190 days a year. In Virginia Beach that translates into 181 teaching days and nine days set aside for system-wide or building level inservices and parent-teacher conferences. Some people might still think that teachers have easy jobs because "school gets out around three o'clock." The fact is that a teachers' contracted work week is 37 hours long, not much shorter than the commonly accepted standard 40-hour work week. But even this does not begin to take into account the many hours teachers must put in outside the contracted time.

A 1984 survey of Virginia teachers indicated that their actual work week was well over 50 hours. The additional time is spent in a variety of necessary tasks for which little time is available during the day. Grading papers for anywhere from 25 to 32 students in seven subject areas at the elementary level to 100-150 students per teacher at the secondary level consumes many hours in the evenings and on weekends.

Lesson planning is more than just writing a set of directions. It requires researching information, selecting proper activities of varying difficulties for various student needs, locating and obtaining necessary materials and developing a method of presentation which will motivate and interest students conditioned by the instant gratification of television. Time is not included in the day for the mounds of paperwork for which teachers are responsible, such as reports requested by building administrators, records of standards of learning achievements, updating cumulative records, averaging grades, filling out report cards and communicating with parents.

Teachers also have additional duties such as sponsoring clubs, debate teams, yearbooks, and coaching sports, directing bands and coordinating subject area departments and grade levels. They serve on system-wide and building level committees, attend PTA meetings, support school activities by acting as chaperons, sponsors, ticket takers and refreshment dispensers. Indeed, given all a teacher must deal with in a week's time, working only a 40 hour week would be a welcome relief.

If teachers put their current work into 40 hour weeks they would work every weekday of the year—including holidays—with only one week off. But teaching has never been an eight to three job. And, for the children's sakes, we can promise you it never will!

Friend of Education Award presented to the men of the Naval Guided Missile School at Dam Neck

By James B. Chapman
Executive Director

Virginia Beach Education Association For outstanding and sustained contributions to the students of the Center for Effective Learning (CEL), the personnel of the Naval Guided Missile School at Dam Neck were selected as Virginia Beach Education Association's 1986 Friend of Education. The award was presented to Captain Drustrup, Commanding Officer of the Naval Guided Missile School, by VBEA President Gary Blumenstein at a recent association meeting.

For the past four years, the young men at the guided missile school have been designing, building, and delivering extremely complicated electronic switching devices and adaptive equipment for the special children at CEL. Their creations have made it possible for the children to communicate through computers, augmentative communication systems, and electronic circuitry. These sailors spent many hours helping the staff at CEL learn to use this equipment and computers to meet the special needs of the students.

In addition, the Naval Guided Missile School's personnel have pitched in to construct changing tables, room dividers, carpeted play area and therapy equipment. Beyond this, they have been active in many school activities, including fund raisers, which allowed the Dam Neck sailors to treat the students to a morning performance of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus this spring. This project was coordinated by Chief Warrant Officer Bill Bachman and Chief Dave West.

In the past, the staff and students of the Naval Guided Missile School have taken the CEL students to the Norfolk Zoo and to Coleman's Nursery during the Christmas season, had beach parties for them at Dam Neck and given them picnic outings at area parks.

"Only the students at CEL know all the contributions and love they have received from these wonderful men," said Blumenstein at the presentation.

Friends of Francis Land House will meet to elect officers

The newly organized Friends of the Francis Land House will meet on Sunday, May 18, at 3 p.m., to elect officers.

The meeting will take place in the newly opened Francis Land House at 3131 Virginia Beach Boulevard. People interested in becoming charter members are invited to attend.

"Friends" are needed to complete what was started in 1975 by the City of Virginia Beach when it purchased the property. With the support of the citizens, the Francis Land House will become not only an historic site but also an educational and cultural center for Virginia Beach which will highlight the 18th century and the plantation life of Princess Anne County.

What's more, unlike most museum houses where everything is done and the rooms are furnished, the Francis Land House will not be "finished." Instead, it will be developing an historical information continues to be discovered. Furniture must be obtained following a set plan, a library started, educational materials purchased and much more.

Call 427-8811 for information.

Continental Telephone closing Virginia Beach Phone Fair

Continental Telephone of Virginia has announced that it has closed Phone Fairs in Virginia Beach.

"Derogulation has allowed a wide variety of competitors to sell telephones. More people are becoming accustomed to paying their bills by mail and making service and billing inquiries by phone. These factors have reduced the volume of business in our Phone Fairs to the point where it is not economical to keep them open," a Contel spokesman said.

The Phone Fair, located at 2547 Princess Anne Road in Virginia Beach, provided a place where customers could purchase telephones and associated equipment, pay bills, and make service and billing inquiries. Such inquiries at the Phone Fair are already made by phone connection to the Eastern District Service Center in Smithfield.

Contel has a local manager in Virginia Beach to provide contact for customers who want to talk face-to-face with a Contel representative. Mike Hall is the Virginia Beach local manager and can be reached at 427-3400 in his office at 2547 Princess Anne Road.

Customers may call these numbers for the following services: billing, 468-8811; residential service, 468-8822; business service, 468-8833; repair, 468-8888.

Motorized vehicle ordinance amended

As a result of recent Virginia Beach City Council action, an ordinance regarding operation of motorcycles and other motorized vehicles has been amended.

This amendment states that it is unlawful for any person to ride motorcycles or other motorized vehicles on another citizen's private property, unless the rider has in his possession written authorization from the property owners.

It will also be unlawful for anyone to operate a motorized vehicle which does not comply with registration and licensing requirements on Virginia Beach public highways, or the premises of a church, school, recreational facility or business property open to the public, unless the operator has in his possession written permission from the property owner.

Prior to these two changes, verbal instead of written authorization was required of property owners.

To enforce these regulations, property owners can notify the Virginia Beach chief of police.

Prior to this change, property owners had to post signs prohibiting motorized vehicles, in addition to contacting the police chief.

For additional information, call the Police Department at 427-4097.

tant but often more confusing than trying to remember if it was the first or the fourth house that had sliding glass doors out to the deck via the master bedroom. You may have heard the advice, "shop for a loan," well, Common-Sense Mortgage, by Peter Miller, helps you do this in the 'privacy of your own (ahem!) home'. Common-Sense Mortgage: How to Cut the Cost of Home Ownership by $100,000 or More is written for the layman, by a man who is an expert in his field. Peter G. Miller is a Washington-based real estate broker and author who has written a weekly real estate column for the Washington Post; his articles have appeared in numerous major publications throughout the country.

Miller's book covers a variety of areas of knowledge necessary to the prospective homeowner. Chapters discuss the following and more:

- How to talk mortgages; how to finance and own condos, PUDs, and co-ops; how to buy into time sharing; how to find the right mortgage; how to compare loan formats; how to buy for cash; how to cut prices on second trusts; how to pay off a balloon payment; how to obtain assisted loans, i.e., FHA; how to arrange buy-downs and wraparounds; how to restructure a loan; and how to develop short-term strategies for long-term savings.

Miller is an astute advisor for those of us who are not real estate brokers or loan officers and have no desire to become either. With careful outlines, legible charts, and pertinent questions Miller makes his knowledge accessible and comprehensible for even the foggiest financial genius. An example: Miller offers for our perusal the 15-year mortgage. It is self-amortizing (which allows monthly payments for principal and interest to be repaid over the life of the loan without a balloon payment); it has level monthly payments and just one interest rate; and it has sensible overall interest costs.

The basic 15-year mortgage, similar to many 30-year mortgages, has gained such popularity that, according to Miller, the country's largest private mortgage investor, the Federal National Mortgage Association, (Fannie Mae), reported in April 1985 that fixed rate mortgages with 15-year terms represented approximately 15 percent of the loans it purchased from local lenders, up from "next-to-none" in 1984.

Miller says, "At first it might seem that cutting a loan term in half will double monthly payments, but this is not the case. For a $75,000 mortgage paid out over 30 years at 13 percent interest, the monthly cost will be $829.65. If the loan term is only 15 years, the monthly payment will rise to $948.93, a difference of $119.28 per month." Imagine how much you can save with the currently low interest rates that are currently! Miller also points out that lenders are often willing to go to even lower rates simply because their risk is considerably less than it would be with a 30-year term.

Not only does the 15-year mortgage allow you a possible lower interest rate, and allow you to pay off your loan in half the time, but it can also result in significant savings: the potential interest savings can be well over $100,000! Example: the potential interest cost over the life of a $75,000 loan for 15 years at 13 percent is $95,807, but the potential interest cost for a 30-year loan of the same amount, and at the same rate of interest is $223,674. In opting for the 15-year mortgage you can cut, and thus save, $127,867 in interest charges. Incredible, right?

No, you are not in the Twilight Zone; Common-Sense Mortgage, makes sense. Check it out. Your wallet might feel the difference.

owners told Council that Virginia Beach boats were being docked elsewhere where taxes are lower.

The city staff was instructed to return Thursday with figures reflecting the lower rates so that changes can be made in the Operating Budget.

The ordinances on the budget and the real estate tax were adopted unanimously except that Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf abstained from the portion of the budget allocating funds to the Neptune Festival because her daughter is in the Neptune Cup.

The Personal Property tax ordinance with the change for boats was approved by a vote of 9-2 with Vice Mayor Reba McClanahan and Councilwoman Barbara Henley dissenting.

McClanahan had suggested deferring consideration of a change in the boat tax pointing out that the personal property tax will not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1987.

Also, a regional association of Commissioners of Revenues is considering a regional approach to the problem and Vaughan said that report is expected in about a month.

Budget

The approved budget includes a net increase in allocations of $55,147 over the budget proposed by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck. That money will be taken from the reserve for contingencies so that there is no change in the overall amount proposed by the manager.

Changes include:

- An increase in pay for school guards from $14 to $15 per duty period at cost of $7,566.

- The elimination of a grant to the Planning Council, $7,500.

- An increase in the grant to the Eastern Virginia Medical Association from $300,000 to $336,636 which was requested by the Authority, $36,636.

- An increase in the grant to SEVAMP (Southeastern Virginia Areawide Model Program) from $16,000 to $23,990, $6,990, pending receipt of information documenting need for the increase which is expected to be available on Thursday.

- The addition of funding for the Hospice Care Program, $11,455.

- Also a 35-hour per week contractual clinician will be added to the Mental Health/Mental Retardation Department by reallocating funds within the department.

Personal property

The current personal property tax is $6 per $100 valuation based on 90 percent of the value. The $3.80 tax rate will be applied to 100 percent of the value and will include all personal property except boats ($1.50), mobile homes (80 cents), farm machinery tools and equipment ($1), machinery and tools ($1); research and development business property ($1), and energy conversion equipment ($1);

The adjustment in the tax rate was made to compensate for a change in the way in which the Commissioner of the Revenue will assess motor vehicles. At present vehicles are assessed at the retail value, Vaughan in line with all other Hampton Roads communities, will assess vehicles at the loan value which is lower.

Although tax bills will be higher for some (fewer model cars) and lower for others, the overall revenues are expected to remain the same except for changes brought about by the lowered boat tax rate.

Vaughan also had maintained that a more equitable assessment of boats would effect a break for at least some boat owners. Boat owners, however, were concerned about raising a tax decrease.

About 40 showed up at the Council session Monday to protest the tax rate on boats.

George Langley, of 4145 Hermitage Road, said that the Boat Owners Association of Virginia Beach was formed in 1983 to do something about the boat taxes in Virginia Beach.

He said the owners made a survey of realties from Maine to Oregon and found that the states of Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Connecticut have no personal property tax on boats. Florida taxes a 26-foot boat at $32 a year and a 48-foot boat at $52 a year; tax rates in eight localities, in North Carolina range from 37 cents to 84 cents.

Most of the boats sold in Virginia Beach, he said are registered in Portsmouth where the tax rate was recently reduced to 50 cents, the lowest in this area. A reduction, Langley said, would keep the larger boats closer to home. He said that the $3.80 tax rate would be like sales tax each year. He compared the tax rate on a beach cottage (80 cents) to the boat tax, saying that the system was not fair and equitable.

Samuel Scott said that it was appalling that Virginia Beach has the second highest tax rate on the coast, next to Washington, D.C.

A home worth $466,000 is taxed $3,600 a year, while a boat valued at $238,000 is taxed $7,140 a year, he said. In Portsmouth, the owner of the same boat would pay $1,127.

John Reid compared taxes paid for luxury items such as swimming pools, beach cottages, and tennis courts to boats with boats coming out paying the higher taxes.

Lou Pace, an unsuccessful candidate in the recent Councilmanic election, said that the personal property tax was the most unfair tax in the United States, that no one pays a fair share, and that it should be eliminated entirely. In its place should be a one-to-two percent sales tax increase which everybody pays.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech pointed out that the city does not have the option to raise the sales tax, that the state has not seen fit to give it that option.

TBA sponsored

Scholarship house underway

By Lin J. Cooper,
 TBA Publicity,
 Special to The Virginia Beach Sun
 Accompanied by the roar of a backhoe, Tidewater Builders Association recently broke ground to begin construction of its 19th Scholarship House. Virginia Beach Mayor Harold Heischberger turned the first blade of earth at a ceremony held in the city's Rock Creek subdivision.

Christopher Companies, a Virginia Beach building and development firm, has been selected to build the two-story, three-bedroom home. The house is scheduled to be completed in August and proceeds from its sale will fund scholarships for area students.

"All of us at Christopher Companies are happy to be a part of this very worthwhile endeavor. This is something we've wanted to do for a number of years... We want to do everything we can to maximize the return on the program by eliciting full support from our subcontractors and suppliers," said the firm's president, Frederick Kober.

Each year TBA selects one of its builder members to waive his profits and construct a Scholarship House. TBA subcontractor and supplier members donate materials, services and labor to the project. When the house is completed and sold at fair market price, the proceeds are donated to TBA's Scholarship Foundation.

The Foundation, the largest source of scholarship grants in the area, assists academically and financially deserving Tidewater students in funding their undergraduate education.

This year the foundation will fund approximately 20 scholarships representing a commitment of more than $47,000. Recipients of the 1986-87 awards will be announced in early May.

The Scholarship House and the Foundation are TBA's principal public service projects. Eighteen houses have been built and more than $150,000 in grants has been awarded since 1966.

Christopher Companies, winner of more than 20 marketing awards in the past five years, expects to build 350 homes and market 300 lots in 1986. Rock Creek, located on Salem Road, is its newest and largest community.

TBA is a 900-member firm trade association representing 20,000 people employed in the residential construction industry in southside Hampton Roads.

196 Pungo fruit and veggie acres

Pungo berries eaten far and wide

 years, has also been a past Chairman of the Virginia Beach Neptune Festival. Joyner will be assisted by Alan Beck, Vice Chairman; Carolyn Culppeper, Secretary; Barbara Bonds, Treasurer; Gary Allison, Finance and Legal Affairs; Judy White, Arts and Crafts; David Clinton, Foods; Bob Braswell, Entertainment; Jack Burroughs, Pre-Festival Events; and Dick Cockrell, liaison for the City of Virginia Beach.

Currently, there are approximately 196 acres in Pungo for vegetable and fruit crops. Most of these acres are used for growing strawberries which are a valuable commodity for the local community. "Strawberries from Pungo are eaten up and down the East coast," says Calk.

According to Gregory Loneragan of the Virginia Beach Agricultural Extension Agency, the annual "farm gate" value of crops grown on those 196 acres of land is $2,266,000...not to shabby for one little berry.

But, it's not economics which motivates the community to host the annual festival. In fact, Pungo barely breaks even on the event. Rather, "it's the pride of the people of Pungo that initiates it," according to Calk. "We just want to invite everyone to come down and share in our Strawberry Festival."

Sharing The Spirit

Why have so many people donated their time and energy to a festival which honors the strawberry? The reason for the festival is simple.

"It's a way for the community to show pride in itself and to have others come and share that spirit," stated Calk. As for the strawberry, it's a small fruit with a very big place in the history of this community. Strawberries were first "discovered" in Virginia Beach in 1607 by Christopher Newport and his settlers. Berries were spotted growing wild near the area which is now called Cape Henry. Virginia strawberries, known as Fragaria virginiana, are responsible for all modern varieties of strawberries eaten today.

Murder information sought

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is seeking information about the April 12 murder of a 26-year-old Virginia Beach woman. Up to a $1,000 cash reward will be paid if a call leads investigators to an arrest.

Disney

On that Saturday morning, Sharon Kimberly Disney (known as Kim) left the Continental Room in the Pungo Shopping Center where she was employed. On her way home she stopped at a friend's house in the 4600 block of Valley Forge Lane, in the Pembroke section. After a brief visit, she walked to her brown, 1978 Pontiac Sunbird and was stabbed by her assailant between 3:45 and 4 a.m. Kim was able to make her way back across the street to the house where she collapsed. Her friend heard a noise and discovered her body on the front porch.

Anyone with information about this murder is urged to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. If your information leads to an arrest, up to a $1,000 reward will be paid. Rewards are also paid for information on any other crime committed in Virginia Beach. Callers are assigned a code number and are never requested to reveal their name or testify in court to collect a reward.

178 grads say goodbye to VWC

By Eileen Clark

In mid-May, the caps and gowns finally arrived just as exams came to an end. After four long years, commencement became a reality for the Virginia Wesleyan College Class of 1986.

On Saturday, May 17, 178 VWC graduates received their diplomas from Dr. Lambuth Clarke, President of the College. The Commencement activities, which were held in the school's Library Plaza, featured an address to the graduating class by A. E. Dick Howard. Howard is a White Burkett Miller Professor of Law and Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

In his delivery to the Class of '86, Howard stated that the graduates of VWC "have a special responsibility. Virginia Wesleyan is a place solidly grounded in the liberal arts...a liberal education is more than mere schooling. It's an education in citizenship."

But it's not just the liberal arts tradition of the College that makes it a special place from which to graduate. According to David Buckingham, Virginia Wesleyan College's Dean of Students, the College's size and its close-knit atmosphere also add to the school's distinct character.

"Sometimes this kind of environment is analogous to the small town," Buckingham said.

Dr. Lambuth Clarke awarded degrees

"Because of the school's smallness and people getting so well-acquainted with one another, they really have mixed emotions about leaving. On one hand, they look forward to new horizons—but by the same token, they're sad to leave the strong bonds and friendships that come out of a small college setting."

Locals look ahead

What do graduates from a small, liberal arts college do when their students are completed? The members of VWC's Class of 1986 will be going off in a number of different directions—from business to graduate school to the ministry.

Some of the graduating seniors with specific plans for the future include Debbie Dougherty, who will be attending graduate school at Radford University in organizational and industrial psychology. She will also be working as a resident director with RU's Office of Residential Life; Teresa Eley will attend Perkins School of Theology in Texas; Gail Johnson will study medicine at the Medical College of Virginia. But with all the diversity and new directions that the class will take, some common elements will bond them together. In the words of A. E. Dick Howard, the liberal arts students of VWC will leave their institution with "a sense of values, a dedication of excellence and a concern for the common good."

2010 Municipal Center Could cost $53 million

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

It will cost the city $52,330,800 to bring the Municipal Center at Princess Anne Courthouse into the 21st century.

That is the total cost estimated by consultants for buildings, site improvements and utilities to accommodate the needs of the 2868 Municipal Center employees anticipated by the year 2010. The figure represents an increase of 63 percent. The number of city employees at the Center and elsewhere in the city is expected to grow from 4408 to 7198.

The cost does not include Education Building improvements or land acquisition costs. The plan proposes the acquisition of approximately 35 acres northeast of the complex and another 25 acres, including the Courthouse Elementary School property southeast of the complex.

The plan, presented by Jack Todd, of the consulting firm, at a work session, shows most parking along George Mason Drive and north of Princess Anne Road with additional parking in the courts complex and near the relocated fiscal services building.

The center area from east to west is reserved for a commons and pedestrian paths.

According to the study, the city will need 47 percent more space at the complex than it has now. Municipal functions currently require 510,000 net square feet of space of which 375,000 square feet are provided at the Municipal Center and 16,000 square feet at remote storage sites resulting in a deficit of 119,000 square feet. Unless something is done the deficit will increase to 36 percent by 1990 and 47 percent by 2000, the study states.

Along with the building space increase, the city will have to increase its parking spaces from 2400 to 3600, Todd said.

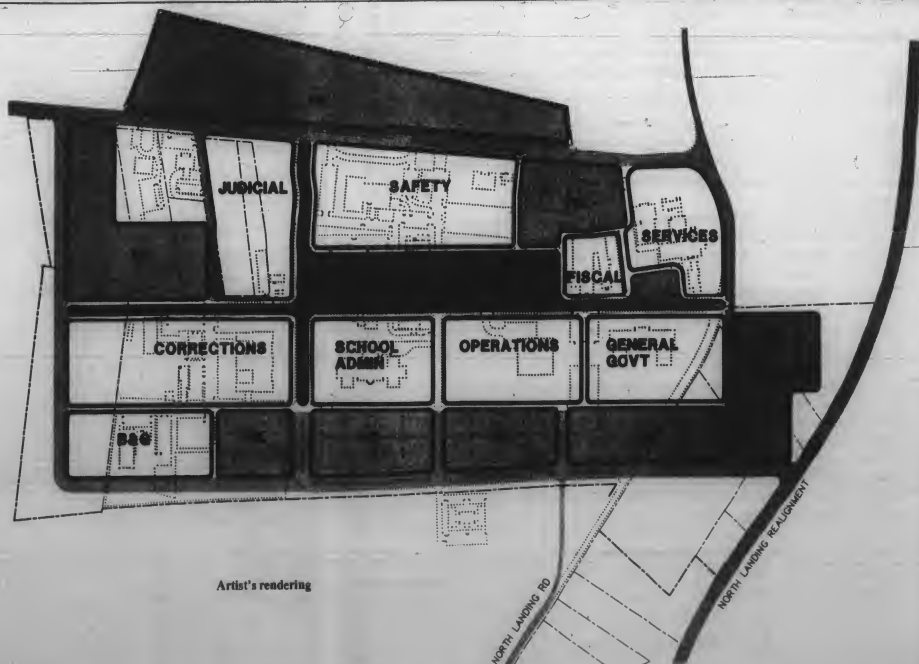

The plan uses the proposed realignment of North Landing Road which is east of the present road.

The acquisition of private property northeast of the complex heads the implementation schedule City Manager Thomas

H. Muehlenbeck asked Council to place the proposed plan on the agenda for discussion and also indicated that Council might want to study land acquisition in executive session.

Graduation!

A time for celebration

May is a special month for many reasons. It's the time of the year when we celebrate Mother's Day, Memorial Day, and springtime in general. By far, one of the most important happenings to celebrate during this month is graduation.

"Commencement is a symbolic time—a time to be both happy and sad; a time to reflect on what has passed and what is yet to come...part of the journey through life."

Graduation is indeed a time of celebration. It's one of those rare opportunities to see special people in our lives being recognized for years of hard work. For those graduating, commencement is a symbolic time—a time to be both happy and sad; a time to reflect on what has passed and what is yet to come. Most importantly, graduation should be seen as part of the journey through life. It's not an ending point by any means. Rather, it's an important point of reference from which one draws the strength and confidence to tackle new challenges.

As the 1986 graduates pass from one world to another, congratulations. Your perseverance and commitment, the same attributes which guided you to this point in your life, will benefit you always. —E.C.

Terrorism:

A distinctive disorder

Political terrorism has become a distinctive disorder in our world today. Modern terrorism is organized, growing, coordinated and, increasingly, it is state supported.

Terrorism has its roots in two movements—Marxism and Islamic radicalism. These forces have given terrorism its reason for being and much of its material support. They legitimize violence, are profoundly hostile to democracy and have found in terrorism an ideal weapon for waging war.

Nations like the Soviet Union, Libya and Iran give terrorists weapons, training and money. They also provide sanctuary and safe passage, often using their own embassies. Without the support of such nations, international terrorism would be impossible.

Terrorism is the deliberate and systematic murder, maiming and menacing of the innocent to inspire fear for political ends. The terrorist declares a total war on the society he attacks. For him, everyone is a legitimate target. No one is spared—ordinary citizens and leaders alike.

The victims of terrorist attacks are unarmed, undefended, unwary and they are civilians.

Terrorists are the shock troops in a war to the death against the values and institutions of society and of the people who embody it.

The United States' policy on terrorism must be unambiguous. We condemn terrorism in all its forms no matter where it occurs. The United States does not negotiate with terrorists. We will not pay ransoms, nor will we alter our policies to meet terrorist demands.

Beyond that, there are a number of things we must do. The United States must also improve its intelligence gathering capabilities so we have a better sense of what's happening in the world. This will help us to discourage terrorist acts and respond more effectively when our citizens are threatened.

Moreover, we have to encourage a more positive response from the world community. Many of our friends fail to act because of greed and cowardice. It seems, for example, the French and the Italians are far more interested in the pursuit of the Franc and the Lira than they are in responding to the Kadafis of the world.

Too many nations seem content to sit it out while their friends are attacked so as not to invoke the wrath of the terrorists. Well, neither cowardice nor greed will easily disappear. But if the United States pursues a firm stand, our policies will eventually succeed and influence our western allies to take more concerted action against this threat to our mutual peace and freedom.

Set in Tidewater

New gothic novel spins intriguing web

Be Buried in the Rain by Barbara Michaels. New York: Atheneum, 1985. 241 pages.

A hot, humid summer in Tidewater, Virginia is the setting for Barbara Michaels' newest gothic novel, Be Buried in the Rain. As usual, she has done an excellent job of writing a haunting tale, full of brooding atmosphere and family secrets mixed with a generous dollop of humor.

Julie Newcomb, an impoverished medical student, reluctantly agrees to spend the summer caring for her grandmother, who has suffered a serious stroke. When she arrives at Maidenwood, the isolated family home, she discovers that peculiar things have been happening, including the sudden appearance of the skeletons of a young woman and an infant on a lonely back road. This ignites the interest of treasure hunters looking for pirate booty, psychics searching for old graveyards, and an archeologist (and Julie's old boyfriend) hunting for the remains of a lost settlement.

Suddenly the house is much less isolated and Julie's boring summer becomes considerably more interesting as she befriends a stray dog, helps dig for the lost settlement and investigates the strange happenings. But events take a sudden serious turn when the dog is poisoned, the house broken into and Julie is attacked. Eventually the pieces all fall into place and almost too late Julie discovers the unsuspected reason for the many inexplicable occurrences.

Barbara Michaels' knack of combining likable characters, both human and animal: picturesque settings and action-filled plots, have made her one of the most popular writers of romantic suspense. In this newest work she once again mixes these elements in just the right amounts to create another suspenseful story.

Practice fire safety on your vacation

Many Virginia Beach residents will be taking their summer vacations in the near future and will more than likely be staying in a motel.

Most states have passed laws concerning smoke detectors and when you check in to your motel, ask if they have smoke detectors in every room. Ask if they would kindly check to see if it works. How do you know if it works if you don't check it?

After checking the smoke detector, look out in to the hall and count the doors that lead to the exit sign. Remember to take the stairwell down and not the elevator when the fire alarm sounds. If you know how many doors you have to pass before getting to the stairwell, the better off you will be in dark smoke conditions. Remember to crawl in smoke.

You're probably saying "Wow, some vacation—worrying about a fire." We all know that fires don't make appointments and they don't take vacations. Someone who is very careless with fire could be in the room right next to you.

You should find out the emergency number for Police, Fire, and Ambulance for that area and put it next to the phone in your room. Do remember to pack your flashlight and put it next to the telephone, too!

If you are vacationing in Virginia Beach, you will find that our emergency number for POLICE, FIRE and RESCUE is 911. All of our motels are required to have smoke detectors. There are 16 fire stations with 272 professional firefighters protecting this resort city from fire.

Have a good vacation and check your motel room for a working smoke detector and exit signs. Pack your flashlight and sun tan lotion and have a good time!

Will you be ready for hurricanes?

When hurricane season blows in, will you be ready?

June 1 marks the beginning of this year's hurricane season, which ends November 30, and Virginia Beach Mayor Harold Heischberger is proclaiming the week of June 1 through 7 as Hurricane Awareness Week.

The purpose of this proclamation is to make citizens aware of the dangers associated with these devastating storms, and to encourage them to prepare in case a hurricane threatens or strikes Virginia Beach.

The last hurricane that struck our city was Hurricane Donna, which arrived in 1960 with minimal effects. During September of last year, however, Hurricane Gloria, a major hurricane with extremely destructive potential, passed just 50 miles off our coast. Luckily, the deadly storm surge associated with this hurricane remained off shore.

Because of Virginia Beach's potential for hurricane damage, every citizen should learn what to do should a deadly storm strike, according to R. Lee Eskye, Emergency Services Coordinator.

"People should attempt to learn everything they can about their homes, neighborhoods and environment in relation to threats a major storm might provide," he says.

The Office of Emergency Services has hurricane pamphlets which provide information such as shelter locations, preparations which can be made, and safety rules. This information is also available at Virginia Beach public libraries beginning June 1. Emergency Services will provide multiple copies of this literature for distribution to groups upon request. Call 427-4192 for more information.

Do Virginia Beach teachers need early retirement system?

LET'S TALK

By Cary Blumenstein, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Is it in the best interest of the Virginia Beach school system and the community to have an early retirement program for teachers?

Five years ago, when the question was raised in response to the implementation of early retirement programs in a number of school divisions, no one knew for sure. More and more teachers approached the association in support of an early retirement program and after several annual requests, the administration agreed to establish a committee to study and put together a plan which could work and be accepted.

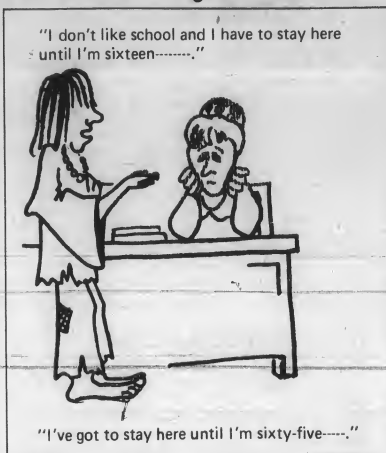

To the chagrin of advocates for a full blown early retirement program with substantial benefits, the committee quickly decided that an early retirement plan, which would be a cost factor to the school system and taxpayers, would not succeed. Consequently, the committee narrowed in on plans which had very limited benefits and could essentially be funded by the turnover of staff and not require additional tax revenue.

Several modest retirement plans were studied including plans in Henrico, Petersburg, Hampton, Fairfax and Chesterfield. The Virginia Beach plan that evolved closely paralleled the plan in Henrico County which has had a good track record. Eligibility for the plan requires employees to have 15 years of service in Virginia Beach schools and be between the ages of 55 and 65. The benefit would be 24% of an employee's final salary and the continuation of hospitalization benefits. In exchange for those benefits, the early retirees could be required to work 20 days a year for the school system. The benefit could last for seven years or until a participant reaches the age of 65.

The program has limits that allow the system to determine the number of employees who could retire under the program in any one year. If the number of applicants for any contractual year would exceed this limit, applicants with the highest total of age and years of service with Virginia Beach City Schools would be selected.

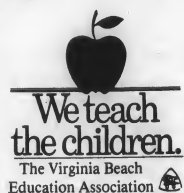

The plan was presented and discussed in January at a school board workshop. But, the board took no action. In a newspaper report, both the Superintendent and school board chairman expressed doubts that the system should encourage teacher turnover in light of the teacher shortage in certain subject areas.

These fears seem exaggerated, at best, since the number of retirees for any given year would be controlled by the school board. In addition, is it in the best interest of students to be taught by a teacher who is burnt out and wants out, or for the school system to beef up its recruitment efforts to find capable teachers who want to teach at the beach?

Hopefully, the school board will take the less expeditious route and adopt the proposed early retirement program. In the long run, it would be better for those teachers who really need the opportunity to get out and better for students who would be taught by their replacements who are full of enthusiasm and energy.

SRA scores continue to climb

The following article has been submitted by the Virginia Beach public school system's public information office:

Students in Virginia Beach public schools have scored an average of between 60 and 73 percentile points, which is above the national average (50th percentile) on standardized achievement tests, according to data received from the Virginia State Assessment Program.

Results of the 1985-1986 SRA achievement test, which is administered to all students in the 4th, 8th and 11th grades, also show that scores of Virginia Beach students have risen significantly since 1982, the first year the present test was given.

At the 4th grade level, 1985-1986 SRA test scores of Virginia Beach students improved over last year in all categories—reading, math, language arts, reference materials, social studies, and science—continuing the upward trend of the past several years.

Scores for 8th graders, already considerably higher than the national average, stayed substantially the same in all categories of the test this year, with the exception of science, which showed an increase of four percentile points. Eleventh graders scored higher on the math, reading, and science tests; scores for the reference materials and language arts segments stayed the same as last year, and scores on social studies were lower by a single percentile point.

It is important to note that when scores are as high as those of Virginia Beach public school students, an increase of four percentile points, as in the 4th grade math score (from 69 to 73), is considered statistically significant. The higher the achievement scores are to begin with, the greater the difficulty is for posting any real improvement. A 70th percentile average level of performance, for instance, means that a Virginia Beach student's achievement is as high as or higher than 70 percent of students nationwide who took the test.

A total of approximately 12,000 students enrolled in the 4th, 8th, and 11th grades in the public schools of Virginia Beach took the SRA test in March of this year.

"I am once again very pleased with the high scores, especially when we consider the phenomenal growth of our school system and the highly transient nature of our student population," said Dr. E. E. Beckell, Superintendent of Virginia Beach Public Schools. "I believe these scores are another indication that our schools provide the high quality education the public demands."

The SRA achievement test is the primary component of the Virginia State Assessment Program, which reports to the Virginia General Assembly, to the State Board of Education, and to the general public how school systems compare nationally and within the State of Virginia. The Virginia Beach school division, however, goes beyond the use of the test for purposes of comparison; teachers and principals are encouraged and taught to use the test results to identify strengths and weaknesses of students and to diagnose individual learning needs.

The 1986 Virginia Beach SRA test results continue to confirm the indication of earlier measures of program performance and student achievement; Virginia Beach students continue to perform at levels significantly higher than the average for their national, state, and local counterparts. Scores for 1986 in Virginia Beach range from 20 percent higher than the national average to nearly 50 percent higher.

McDonald's announces search for All-American musicians

For the 20th consecutive year, McDonald's is launching a statewide search to select America's top high school musicians for membership in the nationally showcased McDonald's All-American High School Band.

Each year since 1967, McDonald's has assembled 104 of America's finest young musicians to represent their states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands in the All-American High School Band. A national search to select the 20th McDonald's All-American High School Band is underway. Deadline for nominations is May 15, 1986.

The McDonald's Band performs annually in several of the country's most famous holiday parades including the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City; the Chicago Christmas Parade; the Fiesta Bowl Parade in Phoenix; and the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif. Students performing in school marching bands, concert groups or jazz ensembles have a chance to become members of this elite corps of young musicians.

From the thousands of nominations received, the Band's music staff will select a group of 104 musicians—two from each state and the District of Columbia, plus one each from Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands—as members of the 20th anniversary Band. All nominees are asked to submit audition tapes of prescribed musical exercises upon which selection is determined.

This year, band and music organization directors will be asked to help locate the nearly 2,000 All-American Band alumni. Former members are requested to send their current address and phone number(s) to "All-American Band Alumni" P.O. Box 11189, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dr. William P. Foster, director of bands and chairman of the music department at Florida A & M University, has directed the McDonald's Band since 1980. According to Foster, "the McDonald's All-American High School Band program has always recognized the discipline, determination and motivation of student musicians. This year's band is particularly unique in that it celebrates 20 years of McDonald's encouraging young people to pursue musical excellence."

Telephone fee set to rise

The following information was supplied by Continental Telephone Company of Virginia: The $1 monthly fee that residential telephone customers pay for access to the long distance network is scheduled to rise to $2 per month starting June 1 by order of the federal government.

The increase, which was set by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), applies to every telephone customer in the nation with the exception of businesses with more than one telephone line. The customers currently pay $6-per line each month.

The "access charge" increase, however, comes at the same time American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T) plans a steep cut in its long distance rates. On April 24, AT&T filed a proposal with the FCC that would reduce its long distance rates over 11 percent. If the FCC approves the measure, it would represent the third rate reduction implemented by AT&T since its historic breakup in 1984.

According to AT&T some of their planned cuts include: An 11.4 percent reduction for long distance calls made between 9 a.m. and 11 p.m. on weekdays; and a 2.7 percent reduction in late night and weekend long distance rates.

Mike Hall, local manager-telephone services in Virginia Beach, said he expects AT&T's proposal will pressure other long distance companies to reduce their rates as well. "If AT&T's proposal is approved, it would mean that their rates will have declined 129 percent since 1984," Hall said.

Access charges first went into effect for multi-line business customers at $6-per-line per month in May 1984. Residential access charges began in June 1985, with residential and single-line business customers paying $1 per month.

Hall said the access charges go to local telephone companies for the cost of maintaining the wires and cables that connect customers to the long distance telephone network. Before the breakup of AT&T, he explained, those costs were included in long distance rates.

Winners of the Spring Artfest on exhibit

"Winners of the 1986 Spring Artfest," an invitational exhibition of seven local artists who work in a variety of media, will be on view Friday, May 23 through June 22 at the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

The exhibition will host a preview opening Thursday evening, May 22 from 7 to 9 p.m., and this reception—both free and open to the public—is called "Edible Art," and features decorative and artfully-created culinary delights contributed by both the participating artists and Arts Center members!

Each of the seven participating artists garnered a Certificate of Excellence at the Arts Center's Spring Artfest, recently held at the Virginia Beach Pavilion in April.

Featured in the exhibition are six Virginia Beach artists: Richard Hovorka, Renata Keep, Ken Kirby, Mimi Lanese, Eugenia Mandelkorn and William Reed; and one Norfolk artist, Ruth Scarlott. The artists were selected as award-winners from almost 200 other exhibitors by juror, Dr. Gerald Donato, Professor of Painting and Printmaking from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

Donato described some of the prominent schools of thought he witnessed at the Spring Artfest, and the "Winners of the Spring Artfest" group of "Beach Surrealists" to high-quality abstract work with a healthy dose of funky lower-East-Side American expressionism in between," wrote Donato in his critical statement.

"Winners" is a varied show of expressionistic and figurative painting, formalist sculpture, and handmade paper, and is a blend of idiosyncratic expressions that are unique to each artist.

These seven Virginia artists each approach their art and media with strikingly different viewpoints, lending each body of work a style specific and individual to each artist. For example, Renata Keep, Mimi Lanese and Eugenia Mandelkorn—three women oil painters who studied in both Europe and America—all choose large format canvases to work with, but each employs a different style of painting and brushwork to obtain equally exotic and compelling results. Keep's winning oil painting, "Past Reconsidered," is a blend of rich and deep colors applied with a hand akin to Cezanne, that depicts an expressionistic tale of a woman represented by a topleless bust in the foreground.

Two of Lanese's works, "Going Up," and "Illusions or Delusions?" are executed with smooth, shimmering surface brushwork in a surrealistic style, seemingly influenced by Salvador Dali. Lanese, born in Belgium and a Tidewater resident for 10 years, is a self-taught painter.

Also self-taught is Eugenia Mandelkorn, who on the other hand, shows thickly-painted, rich portraits of beautiful women—both clothed and nude—with a delightful affinity for light and shadow. Mandelkorn spent five years in France, and says there she became deeply influenced by the French Impressionists. Her large, figurative works have a rich and sensuous surface that seems to absorb and reflect light beautifully.

The fourth painter in this eclectic group is Richard Hovorka, a Virginia Beach artist who received his B.F.A. from Old Dominion University in 1980. Hovorka's winning oil painting titled, "Take Your Tynelot, Dear," is a satirical work that is both humorous and shocking, and shares the quirky, colorful, and eccentric qualities of the current East Village art scene in New York City.

"Winners" also will showcase one Norfolk artist, Ruth Scarlott, who is regionally known for her richly-textured abstract hand-made paper constructions. This exhibition also includes Virginia Beach artists Ken Kirby and William Reed. Kirby does stylized renderings of Tidewater beach imagery, using both collagraphy printing techniques and collage. Sculptor William Reed, who recently arrived in Tidewater after working in Carrara, Italy and Canada as well, is exhibiting his marble sculpture. Reed's very formalist and finely-crafted work adds a sleek and elegant touch to the exhibit.

"Winners of the Spring Artfest" show will be on view in the Arts Center's main galleries through Sunday, June 22. Hours are Mondays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m. As usual, the galleries are free and open to the public, and located at 1711 Arctic Avenue, just three blocks from the Oceanfront. VWC applications are up

Applications for fall admission at Virginia Wesleyan College are up 53 percent over last year, and the president of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges calls the achievement "extraordinary."

Dr. Samuel R. Spencer Jr., VPIC president, made the statement recently at a joint dinner meeting of the college's Board of Trustees and President's Advisory Council. He added that Virginia Wesleyan is achieving this significant increase at a time when the pool of traditional college-age students is down.

Wesleyan officials attribute the increase to the growing maturity of the college, an increasing amount of scholarships and financial aid, and an expanded admissions staff. "We are seeing a good increase in out-of-state applications as Virginia Wesleyan becomes better known, and as we have broadened our recruiting efforts," Steve Stocks, Director of Admissions, said.

The number of out-of-state applications is about triple that of last year at this time.

"Although we do not expect this percentage to continue at the current level," Stocks added, "we will greatly exceed our previous high in number of applications, and we will have as many as 1,000 applications this year, based on previous experience. The freshman class size will be about 300."

Two new full-time faculty positions have been authorized for the fall semester. These include an additional instructor in the education department, where the number of majors this year has increased by 34 percent over last year, and a new position in physical chemistry. The college now has 53 full-time faculty members.

A comprehensive plan for additional facilities at Virginia Wesleyan is now being prepared, and college officials will present in May this plan to the Board of Trustees.

asked whether offices for council members were included in the plan. However, although Todd said that Council space at present is deficient, he did not have an answer.

McClanahan remarked, "I think we're going to reduce the size of Council, the more he talks."

At present the city provides an office for the mayor and an office for his secretary, but has no other facilities for Council members.

Todd said he discussed the needs of Council with the city clerk and with the mayor's secretary.

Todd said that with the land acquisition proposed the city will have enough land to provide for surface parking without resorting to a multi-level garage which would cost four times as much.

Also recommended for consideration are a drive-through window for payment of taxes and fees and a shuttle bus to take citizens and employees from more distant parking areas to the various buildings.

The implementation plan for 1985-1995 includes, after the acquisition of property:

A new brand new event has been included for this year's Pungo Strawberry Festival, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, May 24-25, which certainly will fit with the festival.
It's the First Annual Strawberry Pie Eating Contest, on Sunday, May 25.

This event will pit a representative from each of the seven Virginia Beach high schools in a contest featuring the delicious Shoney's All American Strawberry pie, which has provided the pies for this contest.

The rules are simple. Each representative will have a set number of pies to eat in a set time. The fastest eater wins. To help their representative along, there will be two cheerleaders to root the participant to glory. And of course the crowd will be a part of the action also, so pick your favorite and cheer him on.

The winning school will receive a $100 scholarship for their scholarship fund and each participant will have an award to take home as being a part of the First Annual Strawberry Pie Eating Contest.

Park and ride shuttle service to Strawberry Festival available

By Stuart Calk

Strawberry Festival Publicist
Plenty of parking will be available for this year's Pungo Strawberry Festival.
Besides the parking at the festival area, once again TRT will be providing special park and ride service from outlying areas to the festival area. Nearly 10,000 riders last year enjoyed the shuttle service and plans for this year include use of larger TRT buses to allow rapid transport of festival goers.

The shuttle service will leave every 15 minutes from the two locations: one at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center (pickup point at Mataponi and Court House Road); and at Princess Anne Junior High School on Seaboard Road with additional parking available across the street at Princess Anne Elementary School, also on Seaboard.

Parking will be free with the cost of round trip shuttle at $2 per adult and children under 6, $1. Boarding passes for the shuttle will be sold from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

The shuttle will continue to run on both days returning people to the parking lots until everyone has the opportunity to return. So why worry about parking and driving but instead leave the driving to us in air condition comfort and plan now to enjoy the Third Annual Pungo Strawberry Festival Art and information call (804) 627-9291.

All strawberry 5K runners will receive pint of berries

By Stuart Calk

A new event for this year's 1986 Pungo Strawberry Festival is off to a running start: The First Annual Strawberry Festival 5K Run, scheduled for Saturday, May 24, starting at 9 a.m.

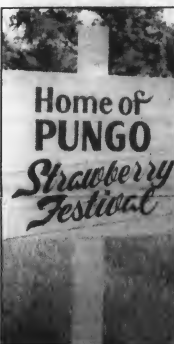

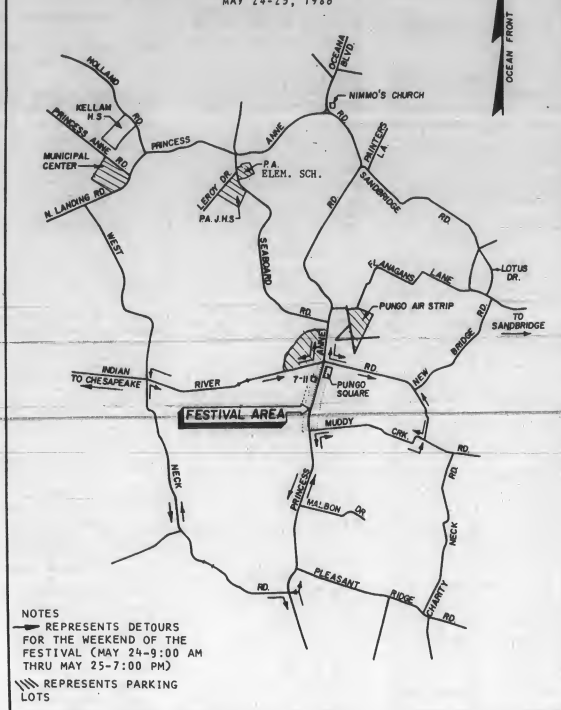

Sponsored by Anheuser-Busch's local representative, Hoffman Beverage, this event is open to all runners. Runners under 18 years of age will need parental approval.

Entry fee is $7 up to and including race day.

Each participant is to receive one pint of locally grown Pungo strawberries with plaques to winners in each category. So plan now to be part of the First Annual Strawberry Festival 5K Run. For further information contact Donnie Lee, 433-7635 for Charlie George, 467-1509.

PUNGO STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL - 1986 OFF SITE PARKING-DETOUR ROUTE

RAY 24-25, 1986

Plenty of parking

By Stuart Calk

The 1986 Pungo Strawberry Festival in Virginia Beach is scheduled for next Saturday and Sunday, and as the largest festival yet, plenty of land has been set aside for parking at the festival area as well as park and ride shuttle service from outlying locations.

Parking at the festival area will be at the Pungo Air Strip on Princess Anne Road and also at the intersection of Princess Anne Road and Indian River Road, with both locations designed to provide space for over 10,000 vehicles each with additional land available to be used.

Both areas will have security personnel and signs to direct people to park and several entrance/exit spots. Virginia Beach police officers will also be directing traffic throughout the area to ease congestion, with the cost to park at $2 per vehicle. During the festival weekend, the section of road from Indian River Road and Princess Anne Road to N. Muddy Creek Road and Princess Anne Road will be closed to traffic, (hours closed Saturday, 9 a.m. through 7 p.m., Sunday, noon through 7 p.m.) with several detour signs and police officers to direct motorists around the barricaded area, which is the festival area. People may wish to use the park and ride lots at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center or Princess Anne Junior High School on Seaboard Road for parking. The cost to park at these two locations will be free with TRT providing air conditioned buses for shuttle use. Cost of the round trip will be $2 for adults and $1 per child under the age of six years. Shuttle service will run every 15 minutes from these locations. Nearly 10,000 riders took advantage of this service last year and TRT will have several additional buses on standby as the festival goes arrive.

Handicapped reserve

Also for the first time this year, a handicap reserved parking lot will be available on a first come first serve basis. This lot will be at the Central Fidelity Bank on Princess Anne Road near the corner with Indian River Road, with the cost to park at $2 a vehicle. A valid handicap license plate or handicap parking pass will be required for this lot's use.

Large amounts of acreage has been reserved for parking this year, both at the festival site, as well as the park and ride shuttle lots with plenty of signs to direct you to these locations and the barricaded area of Princess Anne Road closed during the festival. So make plans now to attend the Third Annual Pungo Strawberry Festival, a festival for the whole family. For information about TRT service call, (804) 627-9291 or the Strawberry Festival office at (804) 426-6131 for additional information.

The Virginia Marine Science Museum opens June 14

300,000 people expected annually after museum opens

By Irene S. Harkness
Virginia Beach Publicist

A standard parental warning upon entering the museum is: "Now don't touch anything! Look with your eyes, not with your hands."

This makes sense at most museums, but not at this East Coast resort city's newest museum. No hands-off policy here. In fact, hands-on involvement with the exhibits is not only encouraged, but also required of visitors, young and old alike.

The Virginia Marine Science Museum in Virginia Beach will open June 14. The 41,000 square-foot complex contains a collection of living exhibits devoted exclusively to Virginia's rich marine environment. The facility's master plan was created by E. Verner Johnson and Associates of Boston, a firm which has participated in the planning and design of more than 50 museums, including the Boston Museum of Science and a museum complex for the Smithsonian Institution.

As the setting for the new facility, Virginia Beach is unique for more reasons than its ability to attract throngs of vacationers to its shores each year. The city is one of the few places where an ocean, a bay, rivers and wetlands all come together in a living illustration of multiple marine environments. The museum was constructed on the site of a carefully preserved 11-acre salt marsh, situated on an inlet with direct access to the Atlantic Ocean. Its close proximity to the city's resort area enables visitors to arrive by car or by a quick ride along one of the areas bright red trolley-buses.

The museum is divided into two main exhibit areas. In the first half, visitors experience Virginia's four marine habitats: a Coastal Plains river; a salt marsh; the Chesapeake Bay; and the Atlantic Ocean floor just beyond the Continental Shelf.

In the Coastal Plains river room, live vegetation borders an indoor "river" brimming with brackish and freshwater fish. Trees along the bank are filled with free-flying cardinals, chickadees and other native birds.

The salt marsh exhibit takes museum-goers outdoors on a one-fifth-mile stroll along an elevated boardwalk that is part of the facility. Visitors will see the dense grasses, trees, birds and other wild creatures that inhabit the marshland over which the museum is built.

In the Chesapeake Bay Hall, an immense 50,000-gallon aquarium holds bluefish, flounder and other marine animals. The floor of the hall slopes downward, giving visitors a sense of walking down into and under the bay. A touch tank enables the curious to pick up and hold harmless bay creatures.

The deep ocean habitat defines an area that creates the impression of a trip in a submersible vessel. After a diving bell sounds and the simulated descent begins, the scenes at several "portholes" change, revealing the marine life found below. "Under the Waves" are sharks and other deep-water marine animals, as well as the remains of ancient shipwrecks on the murky ocean floor.

The second half of the museum, dealing with "Man and the Marine Environment," houses a sea water room, a marine weather room and a sand room and a cultural history hall. It is in this area of the complex that many exhibits and experiment stations permit visitors to control, manipulate and otherwise personally experience marine environmental factors.

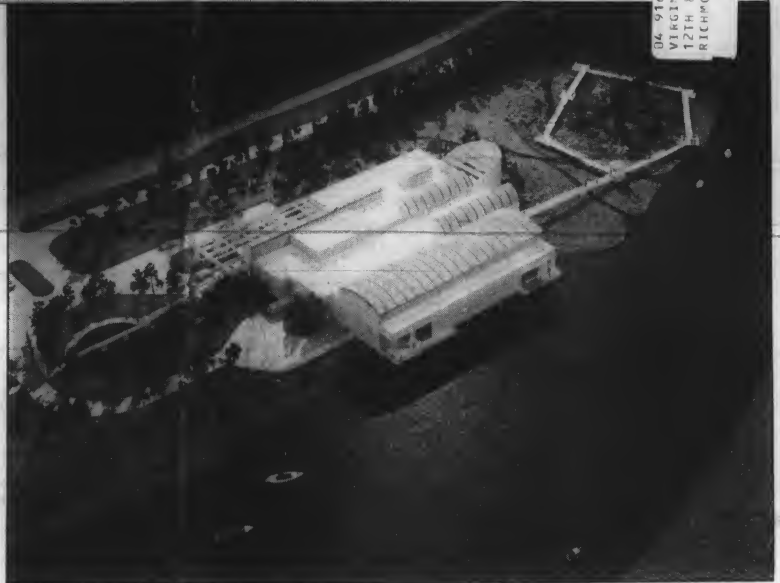

In the sea water room, ripple tanks provide visitors the opportunity to make their own waves and learn about wave energy in the process. An exhibit on marine microbial life allows visitors to extract a salt marsh water specimen and view it on a video microscope, revealing live marine animals too small to be seen by the naked eye. Additional hands-on experiments deal with salinity, buoyancy, depth, color and other chemical and physical properties of sea water.

The sea water room also features an electronic decision making activity regarding pollution of the Chesapeake Bay. Using a computer, visitors make a series of choices about cleaning up the bay. Each choice is reviewed in terms of practicality and cost. The computer analyses both primary costs, or the actual bill for cleanup efforts; and secondary costs, or fiscal effects in terms of industry gains and losses brought about by chosen environmental activities.

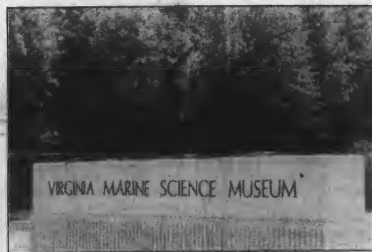

At the marine weather station, museum-goers are able to work meteorological instruments and make computer-aided weather forecasts.

The sand room features a cross section of a sand dune to show the teeming abundance of life contained beneath the surface of the shore. At a sand table, visitors can sift samples of sand, view them under microscopes and analyze their varying qualities. To illustrate changing shorelines, a model of the Southeastern Virginia land mass bordering Chesapeake Bay alternately rises and sinks in water, showing how land contours have changed over the 15,000 years since the last Ice Age.

Model of the soon to be opened museum

The sculpture is of Lookdown fish

½-ton fish sculpture greets Marine Science Museum visitors

In anticipation of a June 14 opening, the Virginia Marine Science Museum has installed a one-half ton sculpture at the entrance of its drive on General Booth Boulevard in Virginia Beach on Friday, May 23 at 10 a.m. The sculpture-features the Lookdown fish which is indigenous to Virginia coastal waters. These beautiful relatives of the pompano will adorn the entrance of this new facility, which houses over 100 hands-on exhibits which invite visitors to participate in the discovery of Virginia's marine environment.

The sculpture, commissioned for the museum by the Virginia Marine Science Museum Foundation was completed by Sculptor/Dentist William H. Turner, a nationally known wildlife sculptor from Virginia's Eastern Shore. Each of the fish in this original sculpture measures nearly five feet in length, with the total sculpture weighing in at 1,000 pounds. The Lookdown is the fish featured in the Museum logo, chosen primarily for its beauty and unusual appearance.

Lookdowns, along with red drum, black sea bass, nurse sharks and many other fish, will be on permanent display in the Museum's Chesapeake Bay Hall; a 50,000 gallon salt-water aquarium showing a "slice" of the Chesapeake Bay. Visitors will experience the Bay as one of four habitats in a "Journey of Water Through Virginia."

The Museum, conceived as a major marine educational resource for the Commonwealth, includes 41,500 square feet of exhibit space and is located along a beautiful stretch of salt marsh on Owls Creek near Rudee Inlet.

The new museum will soon be open

Weights 20 pounds Science Museum asks for return of giant lobster

The Virginia Marine Science Museum in Virginia Beach has requested the return of Harold the giant lobster to home waters.

In a letter to Governor James G. Martin of North Carolina, Nancy A. Creech, president of the Virginia Marine Science Foundation, asked permission to remove the creature from his temporary residence at the N.C. Marine Resources Center in Manteo. "Center Director Rhett White and staff have been extremely gracious hosts to whom we are most thankful," the letter stated, "but being a native Virginian, Harold is probably longing for Virginia waters and we respectfully request your permission to return him to his permanent home in Virginia Beach."

The crustacean has reached a weight of nearly 20 lbs. since his transfer in 1984 to the Marine Resources Center. Caught by Hagan Seafood, Harold avoided certain death through a petition signed by 300 staunch lobster-lovers. When Mike Hagan offered him to the Va. Marine Science Museum, they were unable to house Harold and asked that the Marine Resources Center provide temporary lodging. The specially designed tank at the Marine Science Museum will be ready for its tenant on May 29, the anticipated date of Harold's return.

Built in 1732

Once used as a prison, the Francis Land House is now a special showcase

By Eileen Clark

In 1732, a local legend was built—legendary house, that is.

It's the Francis Land House located at 3131 Virginia Beach Boulevard. And it's every bit as elegant and stately as it was when the Land Family first occupied it over 250 years ago.

Today, the house is a "hands-on learning museum," due to help from the city as well as funding generated through grants and donations. However, the future did not always look so bright for the Land House. In fact, in 1975 the structure was scheduled for razing to make way for a department store. That's when the city of Virginia Beach intervened. First, the city rezoned the area where the house is located into an Historical and Cultural District. Then it purchased the house and the remaining 35 acres surrounding it for $735,000.

Now, after being reawakened to a new beginning, the "house museum" will be the center of many activities. Plans are underway to host lectures; chamber music concerts; wine and cheese receptions; 18th century theatre; hands-on workshops; house tours; private parties and receptions; and more.

According to Susan Taylor, Administrator of the house, "There will be a lot going on here. We'll be focusing on 18th century life; and in particular on 18th century life in Princess Anne, Virginia."

There is even a new 4-H History Club affiliated with the house. The group, which was begun by Taylor, is the first and only 4-H History Club. As members of this organization, "children will learn 18th century customs and mannerisms...the main purpose of the club is to make history painless for children," Taylor stated. "Members will get to do things that children did 200 years ago."

The Land House

When Captain Francis Land III built his Georgian-style home in 1732, perhaps he didn't envision that it would still be standing in 1986. The fact is that the Land House is alive and well in Virginia Beach. It has recently been renovated and reopened as a very special "learning museum." Currently the house is on its way to being restored.

In essence, the Francis Land House is history in the making, a link between yesterday and today; and when it is completely restored, the structure will be a tremendous asset to the city.

In essence, the Francis Land House is history in the making, a link between yesterday and today; and when it is completely restored, the structure will prove to be a tremendous asset to the city. There will be tours, special events, workshops, lectures and more. This beautiful dwelling will bring the 18th century plantation life of Princess Anne County into present day.

In order to develop into the cultural and educational center that the house is capable of becoming, public awareness is needed. Stop by this beautiful historical home and enjoy the 18th century aura. While you are there, offer your time and support.

The Francis Land House is a very special addition to Virginia Beach. You can help to make it a success!—E.L.

VWC upswing

During a time when many colleges and universities are facing financial peril due to declining enrollment, Virginia Wesleyan College is one academic institution which is growing by leaps and bounds.

Dr. Lambuth Clarke, President of VWC, recently reported to the college's Board of Trustees that applications for the coming fall semester are up 54 percent ahead of last year at this time, and out-of-state applications have more than tripled.

In keeping with the unprecedented growth of the institution, a major physical expansion program has been approved by Virginia Wesleyan's Board of Trustees. The expansion program, which will be launched during the 25th anniversary of the school's chartering, will include the building of a Center for the Humanities; the completion of the school's second academic village; and the creation of a central dining facility. College officials hope to have all of the buildings completed in the next five years, during which time enrollment is expected to increase by 20 percent. According to Judge Jerry G. Bray, Jr., Chairman of VWC's Board of Trustees, "There is a clear need for these additional facilities; and the momentum of college is very favorable at this time."

While the school is awaiting the completion of its new facilities, additional space will be created by the installation of two modular units. The units, which will be brought to the campus this summer, will house two classrooms and several faculty offices. "We are simply out of classroom and faculty office space," stated Dr. William Wilson, Vice-President for Academic Affairs.

According to William J. Panney, Chairman of the college's Trustees Development Committee, plans for a capital funds campaign (to support the school's new facilities) will be announced in the fall.

In addition to the physical expansion program, VWC's Board of Trustees also approved a 10.8 percent budget increase for the 1987 fiscal year. The total budget approved for 1987 is $7,625,000. Instruction and academic support account for 35.8 percent of the budget. Student Services are 13 percent. The rest of the budget is allocated to financial aid; institutional support; and operation and maintenance.

On July 27, Virginia Wesleyan's summer festival entitled "Celebrating 25" will be held. The event will mark the actual chartering date of the college. On this special anniversary, the school will indeed have many reasons to celebrate—its building expansion program will soon get underway; a 10.8 percent budget increase has been approved for fiscal 1987; and student enrollment is on the upswing at VWC.—E.L.

Letters to the Editor

Enforce pornography laws

Editor:

Some issues in life are like newsprint. They are black and white. Their impact cuts across income-strata, sex, age, political beliefs and national background; refusal, by society, to address these issues is suicidal. One such issue facing America today is "pornography."

Pornography is the literature of sexual deviance, which includes such disorders as exhibitionism, voyeurism, fetishism, transvestitism, homosexuality and sadomasochism. This 4 billion dollar industry is crime ridden, evil and unhealthy.

In 1970 Lyndon Johnson appointed a "Presidential Commission" on obscenity and pornography. The "Commission" stunned the social science community with a report that was scientifically unfounded and based on unproven theory and speculation. The "Commission" concluded that pornography was: 1) harmless and possibly therapeutic; 2) had no negative effect on adults or children; 3) was not a social problem; and 4) its production and distribution should be free of regulation and control. Although the report was soundly rejected by the U.S. Senate in a vote of 60 to 5, it served as the catalyst that promoted 15 years of obscenity peddling in the name of 1st Amendment rights. Today, even champions of free expression, feminist, civil libertarians, conservatives and Christians acknowledge that the sexual exploitation of children is indefensible, that pornography is unredeeming trash, that dirty book stores and collateral operations breed runaways, dope dealers and victims, prostitutes, and dirty old men, while enriching the coffers of organized crime.

Over the years the systematic outpouring of obscenity through magazines, theaters and television has desensitized the public to the pronounced, intentionally propagated, deviant family lifestyles being taught through media, public school sex education and "low life" literature. Over this period America has done little; however, it is time that a lethargic, unconcerned public throw off, avoid and boycott the obscene and dirty in every form.

Pornography is not a victimless crime. 1.8 million children run away yearly and 85% of those will be molested and harmed if they remain on the street. There are over 600,000 juvenile prostitutes living a painful, godless and cruel life in the U.S. Over one million children have been photographed in sexually explicit poses. 2.5 million socially taken advantage of children are clinically diagnosed as schizophrenic and another 2.5 million have serious anti-social personality disorders. The Center for Child Abuse and Neglect estimates that 1.3 million children are abused and that pornography is the primary stimulus for this.

Television promotes "Soaps", 60% of all movies made are now R-rated, and X-rated movies now generate 400 million dollars a year in America. For the Editors of the Virginia-Pilot to mock the recent "report" done by the Attorney General's Office and to further suggest that linkage between pornography and anti-social and unlawful behavior remains unproved is laughable.

George Albee, University of Vermont's renowned psychologist and epidemiologist has said, "When we remain silent, in the face of any kind of oppression of the weak by the strong; when we tolerate the cynical manipulation of public opinion, the bucksters and influence-peddlers; when a veil falls over our eyes as we see the exploiters respected, we are like the child abusers and pornographers." Europe hemmed and hawed as Hitler's crack German Einsatzgruppen battalions (mobile killing units) fanned out across Europe murdering jews, gypsies and politicians. One and a half million dead men, women and children later the Reich had still not repented. It took an unthinkable Holocaust and the lives of 6,000,000 Jews to return a sense of conscience to Germany. Today we have murdered 18,000,000 babies in America in the name of convenience and choice. We have lapped up smut, excused homosexuality, and hidden behind the letter of the law in the name of individual rights. If we do not take the necessary steps to rid our society of the obscenity blight we will force God Almighty to apologize to Sodom and Gomorrah.

As Atlanta and Virginia Beach have proven, the laws, presently in force, are sufficient to deter the presence of pornography in our stores and on our screens. We need only rise up from our lethargy and insist those laws be enforced.

Look for exits in restaurants

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Every time I enter a restaurant I look around and notice where the exit signs are. This is a good habit for you to get into.

In a panic situation, everyone will run for the door in which they came in and know how to reach it. Fire exists are provided so the restaurant patrons can safely leave the building by way of different exits and not all at once through the front door.

If smoke fills the room rapidly you may not be able to see the front door so look for these exit signs and remember where they are. The way some restaurants are decorated or designed, you could come quickly confused on how to get to the front door again.

The Virginia Beach Fire Prevention office has a staff of inspectors who periodically check the restaurants in Virginia Beach for these fire exits. The fire exit must not be blocked by anything as well as display a lighted sign stating "EXIT."

These fire exits are for your safety. Look for them and enjoy your meal.

Teacher Aide of the Year honored

By Gary Blumenthal, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

This year's Teacher Aide of the Year has designed three vocabulary booklets that are great for introducing unfamiliar words used in the recently adopted reading series in the Virginia Beach City Public Schools. Currently, 390 of her booklets are being used by teachers throughout the school system.

Virginia Zeiders, a Chapter 1 teacher aide at Luxford Elementary School, accomplishments go well beyond her "Happiness is Knowing Words" booklets.

Zeiders, who works with children in 10 classes per day reinforcing reading and mathematics skills, is also an accomplished puppeteer. She presents workshops to the children, teaching them how to make and use puppets. Many teachers capitalize on the excitement and interest of the students in puppets to add zest to lessons and projects.

If teachers need a pattern, they come to her. Her pattern file spans 10 years of collecting. As a collateral duty, Zeiders runs the school's bookstore. In her spare time, she helps her PTA with the craft fair and is in charge of the PTA flea market.

Zeiders was presented her award at the May 28 meeting of the Virginia Beach Education Association and will be honored, along with other teacher aides nominated for the award, at a reception for all teacher aides on June 4.

Teacher aide nominees listed

This year's nominees are: Lois Adams, Joyce Nelson, Bonnie Turner, Cherry Woodroof, Arrowhead Elementary; Lou Alpha, Virginia Beach Junior; Lois Bachman, Shirley Cowan, Thalia Elementary; Patricia A. Brown, College Park Elementary; Jan Bryson, Bayside Junior High; Tami Guiliani, Thoroughgood Elementary; Wanda Honeycutt, Newtown Road Elementary; Barbara Keller, Green Run Elementary; Jackie Matthews, Pam Stott, Fran Ward, Malibu Elementary; Diane McLaughlin, Windsor Oaks Elementary; Frederica Morgan, Kempsville Junior; Doris Moser, Cooke Elementary; Onolee R. Post, Williams Intermediate; Nelsine Reese, Independence Junior; Lorraine Pledger, Connie

Rimarski, Jacqueline Wittmann, Center for Effective Learning; and Erma Lou Sanders, Creeds Elementary.

The Teacher Aide of the Year Award symbolizes and pays tribute to the myriad of contributions and services of teacher aides to our children and schools. "When I sat down and read about all the wonderful things that our teacher aides are doing, I realized that our school system is blessed with very caring, talented and dedicated teacher aides," said Nancy Cummins, a retired member, who served on the selection committee. Rose Morrisette, who also served on the committee, said, "I am truly amazed at what teacher aides accomplish. They all deserve medals!"

Office of Public Information
City of Virginia Beach

As school days come screaming to a halt, the Office of Public Information for the City of Virginia Beach closes the appointment book on another year of visits by enthusiastic third graders.

Every year approximately 600 students stream down the steps of canary yellow buses to arrive at City Hall for a grand tour of City Council Chambers.

It is Linda Stephenson, public information assistant for the Office of Public Information, who has the task of coordinating this program for our school children who are just beginning to learn about City government.

Once inside the foyer of City Hall, the students are escorted to Council Chambers where they receive orientation that includes a short talk, followed by a film on City government and its agencies. Then the fun begins.

Having prepared for the next event, the children take their places as council members, mayor, city manager, and residents, participating in a mock City Council meeting. Issues may extend from problems such as "Should we build another recreation center?" to "How should the leash law be handled."

Each teacher selects two students from the class. One student supports the issue and the other is opposed. Students take roles of City Council members, residents, even the press. They are encouraged to participate in discussions, public hearings, even to the point of taking photos and notes to take back to class. Everyone who is interested may play a role to promote the fact that all residents should take an active part in their government.

To say that these students take this assignment seriously is an understatement. Watching their involvement in this event is as fascinating as the world of municipal government is to the children. It makes one realize that what we take for granted is really a remarkable process of freedom of choice, and that these enthusiastic role players are the decision makers of tomorrow.

There is a light side to the serious business of a pretend City Council meeting, as shown by the thank you letters received by Stephenson after the last tour.

These are some excerpts from those letters.

"I'll try to get my dad to vote."

"(Referring to the City Seal Tapestry displayed on the wall) 'I really do like the rug!'"

"I liked sitting in the chair except they kept closing up."

"The thing I like best is when the kids were pretending to be mayor and stuff."

"I'm glad you put the seal on the wall instead of the floor so people can't walk on the seal."

"Our classroom is a city called Rainbow Valley. Our rows are streets called Lollipop Lane, (etc.), and we have water works and a library. Our seal is a Rainbow and our motto is 'Where Sunshine and Happiness Grow'. We even have more stuff other than what I mentioned."

Historic Francis Land House

will have the opportunity to learn all about its history. Dating back to 1732, the Georgian-style structure with the Dutch gambrel roof was a home to four generations of Francis Lands, one of the first families to settle in Princess Anne County.

It was Captain Francis Land III, a burgess for Princess Anne County, who built the house. The date of the building was determined by a brick from the basement of the home which had "1732" inscribed in it. The house stayed in the Land family until the death of the last Land male, Francis Mosley Land, after which time his descendants sold the structure and the surrounding 300 acres in 1853. Although court records from the American Civil War are somewhat vague, it is believed that the Union Army took over the house in the 1860's and used it as a prison for captive Confederate soldiers.

Now, as another chapter unfolds for the 18th century dwelling, many projects are underway to "restore" the home and bring it to its full potential. "Renovations have been done to make the house usable. Hopefully, over the next 20 years, it will be fully restored to its original 18th century appearance," Taylor said.

One of the biggest tasks at hand is the furnishing of the house. To create as authentic an atmosphere as possible, Captain Land's original inventories will be used in selecting the furnishing. According to Taylor, "We need to raise half a million dollars to get the furniture we really want here. We want to purchase period pieces and they're very costly."

Although the city will provide basic maintenance for the house, everything else—from educational materials to books to furnishings—will rely on public support. Taylor hopes that the public will support the Land House and consider it to be "their home." "We're calling it Virginia Beach's oldest new house. If people are getting involved with it at the ground floor, they will appreciate it more—hopefully, by treating it as their own, they will learn from it," she said. "It's Virginia Beach's answer to the Governor's Mansion in Williamsburg."

To learn more about the Francis Land House and its activities, contact Susan Taylor at 340-1732.

City hosts "risky" visitors

By Ben Kitchen
Office of Public Information
City of Virginia Beach

The Risk Management Division of the City of Virginia Beach enjoyed an informal international day recently as it welcomed two special visitors from Australia.

Under the umbrella of the Department of Finance, the division was singled out last month for its expertise and reputation when representatives from the Wyong Shire Council, New South Wales, visited our city as one of three selected in the U.S., all recognized as having innovative risk management plans.

Other sites chosen for this honor were San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Risk Management Administrator Robert Esenberg was responsible for showing off our fair city to the visitors.

It was through Esenberg that the gentlemen became aware of our innovative division.

Recently named Vice President of Member Affairs and Secretary on the Executive Committee of the Risk and Insurance Management Society, Inc., Esenberg made sure our local Risk Management Division was highlighted during a spring international conference in Toronto.

"We were delighted to be singled out from clear across the globe," said Esenberg, "and since their visit, we have received highly favorable comments with regard to the success of our professional networking."

"They were very impressed with Virginia Beach's program."

A story on Esenberg's recent appointment was printed in the May issue of Risk Management, a nationally published trade journal highly respected in the field.

Esenberg has served as president of the Virginia Chapter of RIMS, and as chairman of the Risk Management Advisory Committee to the Virginia General Assembly. Three years ago, he was appointed by the Governor of Virginia to serve on the Commonwealth of Virginia, State Insurance Advisory Board.

Vacation painting workshop set for Seashore Park

Ray Yoder, nationally known art educator, watercolorist and professional painting instructor, is slated to hold a Vacation Painting Workshop at Seashore State Park and other locations in Virginia Beach during the week of July 13-July 19.

Yoder noted today that there is abundant painting material in the area of Cape Henry, where the Jamestown settlers first landed, at the convergence of Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. Much of the painting activity will center around Seashore State Park with its 2,770 acres of natural beauty, as well as at locations of colonial era homes and buildings. At Seashore State Park, within minutes painters can go from exotic lagoons with bald cypress trees, and Spanish moss through semi-tropical forests to giant sand dunes overlooking the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay.

Yoder's six day workshop is open to beginners and professionals. Students will lodge at Virginia Wesleyan College, the headquarters of the workshop, or choose their own lodging.

The artist-educator has served as Art Consultant for 33 schools in 11 southern states.

A complete brochure, detailing accommodations, materials needed, cost, and arrival times, is available from the Hampton Roads Regional Center, University of Virginia, 421 Pembroke Four, Virginia Beach, VA 23462, telephone (804) 490-2739. There will be an orientation meeting at 7 p.m. on Sunday, July 13 in the art room of the Fine Arts Building, Virginia Wesleyan College. Anyone wishing to attend this meeting may do so.

Hands-on exhibits offered at museum

The cultural history has introduced visitors to the lore of the tribe that lived in the Virginia Beach area long before the first English settlers arrived. A display featuring a simulated archaeological dig reveals Native American artifacts found in the region. At a recreated carver's shack, modern day craftsmen create wildfowl decoys. Other exhibits illustrate the lives of the region's watermen and products they harvest, including renowned Chesapeake Bay oysters and crabs.

Virginia's former Governor Charles S. Robb envisions the unique "hands-on" museum not just as an important new tourist attraction, but also as a means of engendering greater public appreciation of marine resources. At the December 1983 groundbreaking ceremony for the new facility, Governor Charles S. Robb noted: "Until our time, nature could always be depended upon to recuperate, to 'find a way back' after being abused or misguided by man. But now our actions can cause irreparable damage to the environment, not only reducing wildlife, but extinguishing it."

Robb characterized the new museum as a needed focal point for "one of Virginia's most valuable assets and one of nature's most magnificent and magnanimous creations, the Chesapeake Bay."

Museum Director C. Mac Rawls is particularly pleased with the new facility's unique potential for teaching through experimentation.

"It's first and foremost an educational institution," he said. "Students from kindergarten through secondary and college levels will come here for tours and laboratory sessions. There will be classes in physics, chemistry and other areas of applied science, all related to data from Virginia's marine environment."

The facility also features a flow-through sea water research room, provided for the use of college and university students conducting experiments involving live marine organisms.

Estimates are that more than 300,000 people will visit the new Virginia Science Museum annually following its June opening. Many will be individuals, couples, and families from among the several million vacationers who come to the resort city each year. For them the new experience will mean that, in addition to swimming, surfing, fishing and boating, Virginia Beach will have an educational and entertaining new way to get into the water and "walk under the waves."

Visitors planning to visit to Virginia Beach are invited to find out more about the city's marine environment and activities, as well as resort accommodations and events, by calling the Virginia Beach Visitors Bureau's toll-free number, 1-800-446-8038. Calls are answered seven days a week, year-round, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

High school students visit City Hall

By Julia Wilson

On a recent Wednesday morning in Virginia Beach, city officials experienced a temporary change in personnel. Taking the reins of the city in hand for about four hours were students participating in the "Official for a Day" program.

This event was sponsored by the City-Wide cooperative Association in conjunction with National Student Leadership Week and offered students a chance to learn what makes our city work.

More than 80 students, from Virginia Beach junior and senior high schools were hosted by officials in city and school offices. According to program coordinator Diane Derrick of Student Activities, the "Official for a Day" endeavor is a way to offer a glimpse into municipal government and school administration.

As the new "Officials" arrived at the Municipal Center to check in for their day's schedules, a thread of excitement, energy and, yes — nervousness — was evident.

"I believe the best way to learn is through participation. That's why I'm so gung-ho about today," said Cox High School Senior Ron Copeland. As chairman of the SCA, Ron was assigned to City Manager Thomas Muehlenbeck for the day. "I'm a little nervous, but this should be a lot of fun," said Ron.

As the day's agenda progressed, the students took part in a variety of activities ranging from tours to staff meetings.

Scott Sneed, a 17-year old student from Princess Anne High School, got an overview of the city budget from E. Dean Block, Assistant City Manager for Analysis and Evaluation.

"Seeing where millions of dollars are spent is exciting," said Scott, who is planning a career in law or pro baseball. He was especially interested in learning how many baseball fields the city operates.

Presiding over a Human Services staff meeting with Assistant City Manager Hector Rivera was Barbara Balcik, a Green Run High School student.

Down the hall, Cindy Foy from Kellam High School went through the motions of being a lawyer, guided by City Attorney J. Dale Bimston and Assistant City Attorney Crystal Lewis. Cindy's tentative future plans include studying for a business degree, and she was interested to learn what goes on behind the scenes in a legal office.

In Public Information Office, Green Run High School Junior Margaret Shu was informed of its operations by the Director Pamela Lingle. In addition to visiting the Director's Unit, Margaret tuned in to learn about the city's Cable TV Channel 29, went on location with BEAM staff and became honorary editor of BEAM for the day.

There's so much that goes on in public information that I didn't know about," said Margaret, who has interests in fields from medicine to nuclear physics. After visiting P.I.O., she decided technical medical writing could be a career option. "I really liked running around being a reporter today," she said.

At the close of the morning's events, a luncheon allowed the students and officials to get together and discuss the outcome of a day of "officialdom."

"It was great," said senior Daniel Cutright, who visited

Malissia Lee, Housing and Community Development. Daniel plans to study economics or government at the University of Virginia next year and was excited to get a firsthand look at local government. "I'm just glad the officials didn't stick us in their chains and expect us to take over their jobs completely. We were all scared they might!"

Crime Solvers

$2,000 reward offered for info on hit and run killing

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers needs information in locating the driver of the hit and run vehicle responsible for the death of a ten-year-old Virginia Beach boy.

Crime Solvers is offering up to $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the person responsible for this tragedy. In addition, a $1,000 reward is being offered by the Pipe Fitters Local 376 and the Federal Managers Association, Public Works Department.

On Friday, May 5, at approximately 8:35 p.m., Benjamin Thomas Napier and a friend were walking westbound in the grassy area alongside Potters Road, on their way to the Plaza Skating Rink, when both boys were struck by a vehicle. Witnesses stated the vehicle left the roadway striking the boys and immediately turned off its headlights and sped away toward the Lynnhaven Parkway intersection.

The vehicle police are looking for is believed to be a 1976 or 1977 Ford pickup, or light truck, possibly green in color. The vehicle should have damage to the right front, including the grill and headlight area.

If readers have any information about this vehicle or the location of its driver, contact Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Rewards are also paid for information about any other crimes committed in Virginia Beach. Callers are assigned a code number to protect their identity and are never asked to reveal their name or testify in court to collect a reward.
